A TRUE STORY OF THE CIRCUS.

WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY MAT McARNO.

You have seen them in the ring and on the street parade,
But I very much doubt if you know of what stuff
Those circus people are made—
They're a rough, uneven set, and some of them fight with a zest,
But their hearts—and I speak by the card in this—
Are as tender and true as the best.

A dozen years ago a performer made a spring
From the rope to the swing, and missed his hold
And fell, with a thud, in the ring.
The circus was crowded full, and the women screamed with fright,
For the active man of a moment before
Lay still as a corpse, and as white.

Then the clown and a supe came in and tenderly carried him out,
And a breath of air and a drop of gin
Soon brought his senses about.
Plucky and game to the last, he was lifted back to the ring,
And told the crowd that his hurt at the most
Was only a trifling thing.

But when the doctor came he'd a different tale to tell,
For he shook his head and solemnly said
That the man could never get well.
He might live for months and years, and suffer little pain,
But he never would do the double act,
Nor mount his pins again.

The look in the acrobat's face (for he thought of his children and wife)
Was the look of a convict doomed to bear
Imprisonment for life.
Few were the words that were said by his friends of the sawdust ring,
But the tears in the eyes of every man
Were a grateful and goodly thing.

A sympathy human and deep swelled in the hearts of all;
'Tis a marvelous fact that a loving look
Will soften the pain of a fall.
Then they raised him a liberal purse, and sent him home by a friend;
But the means by which he earned his bread
Was brought to a sudden end.

Day after day he lay helpless and limp in his bed,
And oftentimes he cursed his luck,
And wished that he were dead.
But the circus folks went on till the season drew to a close,
When they sought the town where the sick man lay
('Tis the winter camp for shows);

And they called on him, every man, and they questioned him how he fared,
Till a better color came to his cheek
From the sympathy he shared.
Slowly his strength returned, and from racking pains he was free,
But alas! his legs were of no more use
Than the twigs of a broken tree.

Year after year he had been so much in the open air
That he found his close confinement now
A terrible thing to bear.
A thousand kindly acts were done by the circus folks;
One sent him a box of tobacco as fine
As the Sultan of Turkey smokes.

Another sent sherbet and cream, as pure as the snow in flakes;
While the "boss" told the butcher to keep him supplied
With a-plenty of porter-house steaks.
But, oh! when the fresh Spring came, and the pulses of Nature beat,
How he longed for a sniff of the out-door air,
And a walk through the city-street!

And he longed not wholly in vain, for in answer to mute appeals
They brought him around, one morning in March,
An invalid's chair on wheels.
It was one of those cranky things which a man propels with his hands;
A comforting sort of a traveling-gear,
With foot-rests and cushions and bands.

But when he tested it first his friends assembled in force,
And cheered him as they'd cheer a child
Who mounts a circus-horse.
But his arms had recovered their strength, and his fingers were always quick,
So he learned to guide the horseless car
In a way which the clown called "slick."

That year, when the circuses left, he trundled himself about,
And watched the long processions move
In trouble and fear and doubt.
For another year came up—a year ago that day—
When he had joined the cavalcade
And merrily ridden away.

Then as now the horses pranced, then as now the chariots gleamed—
But then all bright the future looked,
While now all dark it seemed.
The season waxed and waned, he was patient unto the end,
For now and then a letter came
Like the hand of a welcome friend.

Writing is not their suit—they fail in the "finish" there—
But their words were as kind as ever healed
The wounds of Black Jack-spread.
And when November came and the tenting season was done:
Ah well! in this jolly good world of ours
There's plenty of chances for fun!

A man with a fractured spine, and with legs that were lumps of clay,
Was not exactly the one to enjoy
A festive time, you would say.
But when the boys returned, they'd a thousand things to tell
Of all the pleasures the Summer brought,
And a few mishaps, as well.

Down to the old hotel, where the circus people stay,
The wounded man would wheel himself
On every pleasant day.
'Twas there that I saw him once, a good five years ago,
And I sat for an hour or more and heard
The conversation flow.

They cracked such rattling jokes, and they told such funny things,
That I thought 'twas a jolly life that was led
By the knights of the sawdust rings.
I'm better acquainted now, and I know with what skillful care
They cast the shadows from out their lives
To make the picture fair.

And all for the sake of him, the friend they never forgot,
Who needed the brace of cheerful words
To make him content with his lot.
But not by words alone did they show their strong good-will,
For they kept up his purse and larder full
During all the time he was ill.

Now what I say is this, and my words on my story rest,
That the hearts of these people who act in the ring
Are as tender and true as the best.
If a record is kept above of the good deeds done by men,
You will find the names of some circus folks
Inscribed by an angel's pen.

AURAMANIA,

OR

"DIAMOND'8" DAUGHTER.

A Story of Thrilling Interest, Powerful Effects, and Exciting Situations.

CHAPTER IV.

AURAMANIA.

Ten years have passed. Come with me, reader, to another scene of real life.

"Real life? Is it possible such things can be?" you ask who have never known what poverty and sorrow are.

Come, reader, with me among the poor and wretched, into the dens of evil, into the kennels of the lost and forsaken. Come and discover, as I have done, what real life is. Come to the workhouse of ——, situated in the direction of St. Giles.

Let us take a glance among the various rooms of this large building, and become acquainted with the characters who are to hold prominent places in this story. We will enter the apartment of the superintendent, Mr. John Bennett—or Jack Bennett, as he was called by the paupers. A dark carpet upon the floor, dark furniture in the room, dark curtains to the window, a dark covering on his easy-chair, and a dark-looking man sitting in it. A man with black eyes, hair and beard, with a brown skin like a Spaniard. No one heard Jack Bennett speak of his family; so whether he was a Spaniard, or a mulatto, or whatever might have been his nationality (he passed for an Englishman), is not known. He is forty years of age, a tall and powerful man. He had lived in this workhouse fifteen years, and had raised himself by his cunning to his present position, and was determined to be lord and master of every man, woman and child beneath him. Revengeful and domineering, everyone must bow with humility before him. Woe to those who did not recognize his superiority. He was unforgiving and cruel, especially to women and children, for whom he had no fear; often, for petty faults, punishing them with extreme rigor. For this he had been named Jack Bennett the tyrant. Still he was a coward; his eye fell beneath the gaze of an honest man. Smooth and oily in speaking to his superiors, or in their presence, he put on no disguise before his pauper subjects. He was known and feared by all but one, and that one he swore to humble. It seems impossible that a pauper should defy the great superintendent, the tyrant—a man so strong and powerful that he could crush a woman with the grasp of his single hand. It is true, nevertheless. A child of ten years defied this Hercules, refused to bow down to his majesty, quailed not before his fearful glance, trembled not at his uplifted arm, shed no tear under his brutal blows, but looked back into the monster's eyes with a defiance that told him he could never conquer.

As he sits in his easy-chair plotting how best to tame this she devil, as he called his victim, let us steal along the bare floors and enter the paupers' hall. All but one are sleeping soundly, without care or thought for the morrow. Come softly to the side of a little bed, which is drawn apart from those of the other sleepers, and look upon a child of ten years, who has thrown herself across the bed without having undressed. She is very small for her age—you would think her a child of seven or eight years. Her face is buried in the pillow. How hard her little bosom heaves! Is she weeping? No, reader; no. This child of ten years has ceased to weep.

We will shed tears of pity for her, as we behold her wonderful beauty. The dark-brown hair, falling in wavy masses; the soft, hazel eyes; the high, fair brow; the aquiline nose; the cherub mouth, alabaster skin, and teeth like rows of pearls. Do not those beautiful features bear a resemblance to the murdered saint's? Draw the brown hair from her brow and lay the amber locks of Evangeline Strafford there, and we see her again before us. Who is this child? It cannot be the child of a pauper! No, no; it is Auramania, the child of the lord's daughter—the child of the guilty Jew—the stolen child, who was kicked under the workhouse gate on that fatal night ten long years ago.

She moves her poor bruised body. Ah! there is no defiance now in those soft, brown eyes; but oh! shadows of an age of sorrow and bitterness pass over her fair young face.

"I'll never shed another tear," she murmurs, "unless to weep would kill me."

A dim light burns in the long room. By its scanty rays we see gold in the child's hand. She speaks again.

"I will hide it in the yard, and when I grow bigger I'll climb over the wall and run away. I'll go and find the starving children, and with this gold I'll buy bread for them. But give it back to Jack Bennett—never, never!"

This was the innocent child Jack Bennett could not conquer. The paint picked from beneath the workhouse gate grew in beauty as it grew in years, and the superintendent ordered that it should have the best of care. The child developed a most remarkable trait, which seemed to greatly impress this Bennett. It was an almost frantic delight at the sight of gold and silver and trinkets, "gold" being the first word her lips framed. So he named the girl Auramania. Her superior beauty, her gentle voice, the willing ear to listen to another's woes, the ready tear of sympathy which fell from her child's eyes, the utter unselfishness of her heart, made her the friend and favorite of all. Many a time had she, a child of three years, gone hungry in order to share her bread with those who for some trivial fault had to go without. Yet this child instinctively shrank from their companionship. It was only when a little baby friend was needed that Auramania was in their midst. She was a strange child, ever wandering alone, gathering everything she found of the slightest value in the form of money—buttons, thimbles, etc. She would carry them safely to her corner and hide them, so that none but herself could find them. If anything was lost, it was sure to be found amongst Auramania's things. On such occasions, when she had to deliver up her treasures, she would stand for hours gazing with regret upon the spot from which they had been taken.

Thus the first five years of her life were passed, when an event occurred which changed the whole tenor of her future existence. The superintendent, on taking his customary rounds, was suddenly struck with the child's extraordinary beauty—with her soft, brown hair falling almost to her feet.

"Remember," he said, turning to the matron, "I forbid this girl's hair to be cut," as the thought of possessing her in a few years shot across his sensual mind. He caught the long hair, as she stood with her back towards him, and roughly and cruelly jerked back her head. She sprang from his grasp, leaving a handful of her silken hair between his fingers.

She turned and faced him.

"How dare you pull my hair? How dare you?" she cried, stamping her foot, and flinging back her head with the dignity of an offended princess.

The astonished tyrant raised his mighty hand and struck the child of five years to the earth. This Hercules looked upon her beauty as she lay at his feet. But not for long. Like a young panther, the child sprang at the hand which had clutched her torn hair, and bit his wrist deep into the flesh. The women were in horror-stricken silence, and, in the gentle Auramania, and by force they carried the now frantic child from the superintendent's sight. And from that hour began the sad life of our heroine. The superintendent, foaming with rage, declared that he hated the brat; and the hair that, for his pleasure, he had commanded not to be cut off was now to remain for his revenge.

"The sins of the parents shall be visited upon the children." Thus the ungovernable passions of avarice, revenge and cunning, which filled the heart of Raphael Goldsmith, smouldered in the breast of Auramania, causing constant war with the enduring, self-sacrificing soul—the soul of purity, charity and love—the soul of her gentle mother. Even the strong characteristics of her grandfather, Lord Strafford, developed themselves in this child—utter fearlessness of spirit, strong will to oppose the wrong and uphold the right. A great, grand and noble soul, bursting into life, was to be wrecked by the evil nature of a father descending to his child. Language cannot describe the misery through which Auramania passed. Tortured beyond endurance by Jack Bennett, she became apparently indifferent to his cruel treatment, and wrapped herself up in her own loneliness, and made her own sad life. There was no love, no pity, to be found there. In her miserable bed, when no eye was upon her, she sobbed out the anguish of her heart, lamenting her desolate existence.

The superintendent, discovering the noble traits of character she possessed, went to work with a revengeful determination to crush them. "That ever a child should enter the workhouse to defy him! Oh, he would bend her haughty head yet." Jack Bennett knew not the spirit he had to deal with, or he would have known that death alone could humble the proud head of Auramania. Thus her weary life went on until she was ten years of age, when another incident occurred which helped to ruin and destroy this child of circumstances.

Locked up in a lonely room, bruised and sore (having been punished for a fault she had not committed), lying fearless upon a heap of straw, her eyes fell upon the waistcoat of the superintendent. She sprang at it, and was about to give vent to the rage which consumed her by tearing it in pieces, when two gold sovereigns fell rattling on the floor. She clutched the beauties, as she called them, and danced around the room with wild delight.

"I will keep them!" she cried. "Has he not beaten me for telling the truth? Yes, I will keep them, and never give them up."

She hid them in the hem of her dress, and set her lips firmly, with the resolution never to reveal their hiding-place.

Ah, poor girl! you little thought it was a trap the villain had laid for you—little thought how fearful would be the consequences of that act!

The matron of the workhouse pitied Auramania, but dared not openly show any sympathy, for fear of the great man. We will do her the justice to say that she had attempted to remonstrate with Mr. Bennett, but, finding the girl only fared worse because of this interference, had long since ceased to trouble herself.

The superintendent, more politely than usual, begged the matron to bring him his waistcoat, which he had left upon the floor in the loft where the "she devil" was confined, cautioning her, with peculiar emphasis, to be careful of the money in the pockets. As the matron entered the cold, bare room, with only a heap of straw in the corner, and gazed at the young thing with her pale and determined countenance—standing ready to defy and battle anyone who should assault her, never sinking beneath the tyrant's cruelty, but rising in revengeful triumph above it—the old matron's heart melted, and her tears fell. Auramania's lip trembled, for they were the first tears that were ever shed for her. The look softened upon her face, and she offered her poor bruised hand.

"O child!" exclaimed the woman, "if you would only be less stubborn and give in a little."

"I am not stubborn," she answered softly. "You must not think me stubborn and self-willed because I won't acknowledge a right to be a wrong, nor speak an untruth, nor stoop to humble myself to so bad a man as he. Do not fear for me, matron, for I have a spirit the great man can never crush."

"Yes, my dear; you are a brave girl," sobbed the woman; "a noble girl, and a good girl. But oh!" she exclaimed, turning her eyes upwards, "what a beautiful child you used to be. Now you never smile, nor cry. My dear, you don't know what a wretch he is. He sent me here for his waistcoat, and he says there is money in it."

The woman's face turned pale as she picked up the waistcoat with the pockets turned inside out.

"Have you taken it?" she gasped.

"I have," Auramania answered, "and intend to keep it."

"For God's sake, give it up, or he will kill you!" begged the matron.

"Let him kill me, then," she replied; "I don't care—the sooner the better."

"My child, do you not know it's a theft you have committed? And it's wicked, very wicked!"

"Wicked!" said Auramania, turning quickly upon her. "Does he think it is wicked to lock me up day after day, to tear my hair out by the roots, to beat and bruise my body, to kick me like a dog, to torture my young life because he cannot make me bow, crringe, and fall down upon him—because he cannot make me evil, as he is himself? Steal!" she cried. "I would steal from him his last drop of blood, and think it no sin."

There was no answer. The matron hung her head in silence.

"I did not mean to speak crossly to you," she said more calmly, as she saw the grieved attitude of the matron. "Give him his waistcoat, and say to him that I stole the money; and if he wants to kill me, for him to be prepared, for I shall make a hard struggle for my life."

The brute foamed and raged about the room like a madman on receiving the message of Auramania, with the torn and empty waistcoat. But suddenly, and to the matron's astonishment, he ordered her freedom.

It was on the night of this occurrence he sat brooding in his easy-chair, while the child slept wearily, dreaming of an angel who came and wiped her tears away. Hours passed before the tyrant came to a decision. Now, with a self-satisfied smile upon his hard lips, he sat at his desk and wrote a long letter to his bosom friend, the superintendent of the jail. The next day the girl of ten years was carried in a cart to the court of ——, and there, accused of stealing two pounds from Mr. John Bennett, she was tried, found guilty and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. As the child was about to be placed in the prisoners' cart, to be taken with the murderous gang to the —— Jail, Jack Bennett grasped her hand.

"Auramania," he whispered, "it is not too late, even now, to confess all. Return the money and be humble for the future."

With her chained hands she struck the arm which had grasped her own, and with a look upon her face that told him how much she despised and hated him, jumped into the cart.

In the prison there were many ready to pity Auramania, but she shrank from them. The pride of birth showed itself daily, and the child repelled all by the proud glance of her dark eye. As year after year passed she became more and more disgusted with those with whom she was obliged to associate. She moved, pale and fearless, like a spectre, through the prison halls, until the inmates began to suspect the girl was partially insane. She never smiled, and had never been seen to shed a tear. She performed her daily task mechanically, and when finished wandered alone, as she had done in the workhouse. One evening, after the departure of Mr. Bennett, Auramania was placed in a cell, and was told she would henceforth occupy it. Thus she dragged her weary life along. At times, she raged like a furious maniac, to be revenged upon the man who had subdued the angel of her nature and raised up a devil.

LITTLE MOLLIE BROWN, Somersault Equestrienne.

With a relentless hate and a determination to carry out his oath that he would humble her haughty spirit, Jack Bennett visited the prison weekly, goading her with his triumph at every opportunity. But her father's spirit of revenge, which darted from her dark eyes, would at times cause the villain to tremble in despite of his outward daring. 'Twas the secret consciousness that in his heart he feared this girl, that caused him hate her. On the nights of these visits to the prison, he would start up in his sleep with the fearful thought that Auramania had escaped, and was standing over him with uplifted dagger, ready to strike him to the heart. On waking, the unprincipled brute began to fear for his life; so the two superintendents plotted the ruin of the silent girl. They placed gold in her way, which she stole, and kept as the dearest treasure of her life. When questioned about the money, she stood morose and silent, no longer confessing the truth. It was not necessary for her to confess, as hired spies came forward to prove Auramania was the thief. And thus the years of her imprisonment were lengthened.

The superintendents were careful that the girl should not be seen by the visitors, as her remarkable appearance would surely have attracted their attention. At times this was unavoidable, and it was with deep interest they would ask who she was. The answer was always read:

"She is Number Nine—she belongs to the workhouse of ——. She is a thief, and was a dangerous one. Now she's insane, but a hard worker, and harmless; so we keep her out of pity."

"Poor girl. Do you think she will ever recover her senses?

"We hope so—that is why we keep her here. The superintendent of the workhouse, Mr. Bennett, is very much attached to the girl, and hopes to reform her, should she ever recover her reason."

"Ah, Mr. Bennett is a good man."

"Devil!" would burst from the lips of Auramania, and with a wild, despairing laugh she would turn from them, convincing the visitor of the truth of the story as to her insanity.

Thus when the monster saw the dawning beauty bursting into light, he swore to possess her body and soul. He had her closely watched, so that all chance of escape was impossible. Poor Auramania! Ten years in a workhouse, ten years in a prison!

* * *

A girl of medium height and rounded form—a pale, beautiful and classic face, the sweet mouth losing its beauty by the firm pressure of her lips; her soft, brown hair falling almost to her feet over her coarse clothes.

Ten years had passed, and Jack Bennett told Auramania that, through his intercession, she was free to return to the workhouse. On the same evening that Auramania returned to her miserable home, where she had spent the first ten years of her life, she sat musing in a lonely room as to her future fate, when she was startled by the sudden entrance of Jack Bennett. He locked the door, and stood white and trembling, with a look in his eye that the girl had never seen before; and for the first time a fear for herself entered her heart. The young girl's soul was purity, and she never dreamed of the villain's base intentions.

"Has he come to kill me?" she thought, as she watched his every movement.

"Don't be frightened, Auramania," he whispered. "I have not come to harm you—only to see if we cannot understand each other, and be friends."

"Friends!"

"Yes, Auramania, friends. I am very sorry I ever treated you so harshly; but it was all a mistake. I confess I was wrong. You are a brave and noble girl, and I intend for you to remain here and become matron. You know I am master here, and can make you mistress. You are smart and clever, and if you will only forgive me and shake hands, you shall be master over me."

He drew nearer, as she recoiled, and held out his tawny hand.

"Don't be afraid of me, Auramania," he whined.

With one bound he caught her wrists, and dragged her struggling to the couch. Then the unfortunate girl understood her danger! What now were all past sufferings to the fearful terror of that moment? In her madness she tore his hair, bit him, and dug her nails into his flesh. At length, roused for an instant, by his superior strength, to a strength equal to his own, he could hold her no longer. She sprang from his grasp, and, with supernatural power and will incredible, she burst open the door and rushed screaming through the halls.

On the same night that Auramania returned to the workhouse, a wretched creature was found in the streets, half dead, and brought there. While the scene transpired above, this starving man, wrapped in rags, stood shivering in the matron's presence—a picture so touching as to move the sternest heart to pity.

"What are you shivering at?" said the matron kindly. "You are not afraid of me, are you?"

"I am cold, cold," he answered softly, the tears streaming down his wan cheeks.

He looked around absently as he walked to the fireplace, and laughed simply as he fell upon his knees and held out his chilled hands to the warm blaze.

"Thank you, kind lady; thank you," he said innocently, as he sat down upon the carpet and rubbed his thin hands through his silver locks.

"Have you got such a thing as a name?"

"I am Shadow! poor boy Shadow, I am."

Yes; it is our poor imbecile, ever fancying himself the boy of twenty years ago.

"Well, Shadow, you are a pretty old boy," she answered, smiling. "Where are you from?"

"The streets."

"Did you never live in a house?"

"House!—yes, long ago—long ago."

"What have you been doing in the streets?"

"Looking for the child."

"Good heavens, fool! you don't mean to say you are a father!"

"I was a beautiful lady's child. Master killed her. She begged and begged, but he killed her, he did. So I have wandered and wandered these long, long, weary years, to find my baby! But he buried her in the snow, in the deep, deep hole where my angel mother and Evangeline lie."

At this instant a loud scream burst upon the matron's ear, followed by another and another, more piercing than the first.

"Great God!" she cried, "what is that?" and rushed from the room, leaving the idiot to follow or remain.

The sound grew nearer and nearer. As the matron entered the yard, her eyes met with a sight which chilled her blood—a sight she never forgot up to her dying hour. The cries were Auramania's. As she rushed through the dark halls, Bennett, baffled in his base attempt, followed in quick pursuit, and without hat or coat. He caught her by the hair as she entered the yard. A crowd of men and women, startled by cries such as they had never heard before, had gathered together, and looked with horror upon the brutal scene.

"Do you see this girl?" said the disappointed wretch, as he clutched her hair with one hand and grasped the whip with the other. "Have I not tried to make of her a Christian? Have I not saved her from a life of shame, by keeping her under my care? But, you see, she defies me to the very last. Not three minutes ago I caught her in my room, robbing the desk where I keep my money. Confess what you have done with the gold you stole, or my Heaven I'll break you to bits before I leave this spot!"

Down came the whip mercilessly upon the tender flesh. But she stood like a martyr, her teeth set, not a cry escaping her lips.

"Beg my pardon!" he shouted. "You have been in a fever ever since you could speak, and by Heaven I'll take that curse out of you!"

"Beg your pardon!" she exclaimed, and the passion he had aroused now burned with more fury in her eyes as she heard the new charge brought against her.

Once more, and for the last time, the monster raised his whip, but stopped as he saw, not Auramania, but a fiend, who crouched before him in the attitude of defense, ready to spring upon him. The eyes glared with maniac fury, while the parted lips moved in low, infuriate accents.

"Take care, Jack Bennett! take care!" she cried. "You have raised a devil in me. Take care! Raise but that whip one inch higher, and I'll tear you in pieces!"

For an instant he dropped his whip and cowered before her wild glance.

"What have I ever done to you?" she continued. "You have treated me worse than a dog; beaten and bruised my tender limbs; whipped me for laughing, for crying, for being hungry and thirsty; bound me hand and foot when I spoke the truth, and paid me when I lied. Because my soul loathed you, because I refused to be the evil creature you would have me, you cast me for ten years into a prison, shutting from my sight the blessed sun, shutting from my heart all faith in God. If I am a liar and a thief, you have made me such. If I am mad, you have driven me mad—you——"

Provoked to fury by her daring, he shrieked aloud: "You she devil! I'll kill or conquer you!"

"Kill me, then!" she cried, and threw her arms open and her head back; "for you shall never conquer!"

The baffled wretch quailed once more before the frenzied girl. The bell for prayer now resounded through the house.

"That bell has saved you," said the superintendent; "but I'll be back after prayers. Then, you beggar's brat, you paper, you she devil, we'll see who'll be master, Jack or I."

With these words he ordered the paupers to prayers. They turned back to look with pity upon the poor girl, who stood fearless and defiant, with arms folded, and the red marks of the whip upon her neck and shoulders.

"I come, I come, from a spirit-band,
To bring these bright hopes of a far-off land,
Where rose-trees blosso n and myrtle bloom,
Where love is all free from the haunts of gloom.
I come, I come, in the stillness of night,
When the slumbers are hushed and the lady dreams are bright,
To bring the gleams of a far-off day,
When sorrow and pain have passed away.
I come, I come, yet thou seest me not,
Yet the spirit of Shadow is around thy cot,
When calm thy sleep, when sweet thy smile,
When dreaming of lands in the far-off isle."

Soft and sweet and mournful issued the idiot's simple song—the only song he ever sang—upon the midnight air, thrilling the entranced listener as it had thrilled and calmed the murdered Evangeline, lying upon the cold ground in the dingy house of old Abraham Goldsmith. Auramania's head droops upon her breast, the wildness fades from her eyes, the firm lips relax, the beautiful face softens. She gazes around in the darkness, but can see nothing, startled by cries such as they had never heard before, had gathered together, and looked with horror upon the brutal scene.

"Do you see this girl?" said the disappointed wretch, as he clutched her hair with one hand and grasped the whip with the other. "Have I not tried to make of her a Christian? Have I not saved her from a life of shame, by keeping her under my care? But, you see, she defies me to the very last. Not three minutes ago I caught her in my room, robbing the desk where I keep my money. Confess what you have done with the gold you stole, or my Heaven I'll break you to bits before I leave this spot!"

We must eat, drink and sleep, laugh, dance and sing,
Be merry or sad, and all that sort of thing—
We must cringe to the rich and frown on the poor,
Look with awe on the wise and with pity at the boor,
Throw away the old fashion and take up the new—
Yes, do just exactly as other folks do.

If dear Mrs. Darling should sport a new bonnet
A foot or more high, with a Cupid upon it,
And a voluminous dress with twenty yards' trail,
A necklace of diamonds, a Brussels lace veil,
We must envy her taste, or get the same too—
Yes, do just exactly as other folks do.

And suppose not an atom of comfort you feel
With a boot on your foot with a very high heel,
And a toe that will measure an inch from the nail,
And a hat with a wide brim or no brim at all—
No matter, you must wear them. What's that to you?
You must do just exactly as other folks do.

Should your well-to-do neighbor give a big shine
With viands delicious and soujuitive wine,
You must get things on tick, or some such a game,
Or borrow the money, and e'en do the same;
Though you're deeply in debt, with bills over due,
You must do just exactly as other folks do.

As you cannot stay single the whole of your life,
Remember this well in selecting a wife:
'Tween a rich and a poor one you will have to choose—
Don't hesitate long, but the poor one refuse;
Take the one, if you can, who is rich as a Jew,
And do just exactly as other folks do.

When you visit your friends, take very good care
To observe that they really have "nothing to wear,"
That the carpets are seedy, the harp out of tune—
Note well all their errors, and ridicule some.
With others upon it, though you know it's not true,
And do just exactly as other folks do.

In driving a bargain, take very good care
To say to the buyer, "It's all on the square;"
Call an article good, if it is poorly made—
It's no harm to lie in regard to a trade.
Bid conscience avaunt, and thus bring to view
That you're doing exactly as other folks do.

Wrap the cloak of religion around you so tight
That your hoofs may be hidden, then you're all right;
As you walk into church with a smile on your face,
A sanctified air and a well-borrowed grace;
Though your sins may smite hard, kneel down in your pew,
And pray just exactly as other folks do.

We know very well to be poor is a crime,
So be sure to the needy you don't give a dime;
Grasp your ill-gotten wealth 'till death draweth near,
Then bequeath in your will, in penitent fear,
To the sick and the sad a hundred or two,
And do just exactly as other folks do.

Then the last and the worst of all things is to die—
Then your heirs will hozannah your virtues on high;
It is but their duty. But I'll not longer dwell;
Then you go up to Heaven, or else—very well,
I'll leave you, and bid you this counsel to ponder—
Go do just exactly as other folks do. JAY EYRE

ON THE BRINK,

OR THE MEETING IN THE GROTTO.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY P. H. MARCELLUS.

Between Cluse and Sallenches, in the sublime Chamouni, is that wonderful cave known as the Grotte de Balme. The opening to this mountain gullet, whose awesome depth no mortal has ever fathomed, yawns many hundred feet above the surface of the river Arve. The abyss is shrouded in eternal night; but the wailing and roaring of invisible waters, which course through subterranean canals, can be heard with terrible distinctness.

Some years since the government of Savoy, to provide for the safety of tourists, caused steps to be cut into the rock and balusters erected. Previously more than one fatal catastrophe had occurred in the cavern. The privilege of exhibiting the wonders of the grotto was let to a widowed Savoyarde. This woman was proprietress of a cabaret hard by, and, like other inn and hotel keepers, kept a book for the registration of visitors. The duty of ciceroning sight-seers devolved principally, however, upon the widow's comely daughter, a black-eyed, brown-skinned maiden of eighteen.

On a lovely afternoon in July, A. D. 1833, while the fair, or rather the dark Marietta was standing at the door, gazing pensively down the road to Sallenches, she was approached by three young men who requested that they be shown the wonders of the cave. Their dress and general appearance stamped them as aristocrats. Two of them were dark-haired, handsome fellows; the third, though not quite so good-looking, had something more imposing in his presence, and, a close observer would have remarked, was treated with something like deference by his companions. He was of medium stature, with fair hair, moustache and imperial, a searching, gray eye, and in the neighborhood of twenty-six years of age.

From the first words they uttered Marietta knew that they were Frenchmen. Procuring torches for all hands, she led them into the grotto. The strangers penetrated every accessible nook and corner of the place, and, after having occupied about three-quarters of an hour with their explorations, commenced their return trip.

In the meantime a new guest had arrived at the cabaret. It was an elderly man with something of a military bearing, a cold, serious countenance and restless eyes. Marietta having not yet returned with her party, her mother was herself compelled to escort the newcomer, whom, in spite of his taciturnity, she soon discovered to be an Englishman. After registering his name in the guest book he started off with the hostess, both carrying lighted torches.

Just as they had entered the cave they were met by the three young Frenchmen and their pretty guide, returning. The travelers in passing endeavored to scan one another's faces, but the weird, flickering torch-light did not illuminate the space sufficiently to permit full inspection. The landlady kept on with her companion, and the young men with their charming guide again issued into the open air.

"It is an Englishman," said the blonde young gentleman. "Did you remark his quacking speech?"

The others laughed. Soon after the party reached the hostelrie.

"Now, messieurs," said Marietta, "you will oblige me by inscribing your names in the register book ere you depart."

"Certainly, ma mignon," said the blonde, who was evidently the spokesman of the trio; "bring it hither and you will find that we have names not to be ashamed of."

The girl brought the book and placed it upon the table. The blonde gentleman sat down and carelessly turned over the leaves. The other two peered over his shoulders.

"Hm!" said one of these, "many interesting names."

"I wonder," said the other, "whether the gentleman whom we met in the cave has already written down his name?"

"Let us see!" said the blonde, turning to the last page written upon. The last name here must have been written but shortly previous, for the ink was hardly dry. When it met the gaze of the blonde gentleman, he started violently. He stared as if he could not trust his eyes. But suddenly he seemed convinced. His face became disfigured with a terrible frown, and his eye flashed lightnings as he started up and exclaimed:

"Look there—upon the name of a villain and a coward! The knave is now in the grotto—fate has delivered him into our hands. We must punish him as he deserves."

The other two cavaliers flushed with anger as they read the name.

"Yes, punish him—with death!"

"Girl, the torches, quick! We must back to the cave at once."

Marietta vainly resisted. The torches were wrested from her hands, and the three cavaliers darted madly out of the house towards the grotto. She was frightened and bewildered, but followed them quickly. What did it all mean? Perhaps some affaire du cœur was at the bottom of it all. Who could the haughty Briton be? Perhaps a rival or a seducer, or a hard-hearted father who had destroyed the peace and happiness of a life.

Marietta was nimble and fleet-footed, and caught up with the young men just as they were entering the Grotte de Balme.

"Take this torch, girl, and guide us!" commanded the fair gentleman. Marietta obeyed, trembling. All her hopes now rested upon her being able to mislead her followers, for the grotto had many windings and passages, and the Englishman might possibly leave it by a different one from that she took. But her hopes were doomed to disappointment. At a sharp turn in the passage the two parties suddenly came together. The blonde youth rudely pushed Marietta aside, sprang in front of the son of Albion, and excitedly addressed some words to him in English—which language was but imperfectly understood by the girl and her mother.

The stranger was at first seized with consternation, then, recovering himself, became indignant and violent. All three of the Frenchmen then seized him.

"Down with the miserable scoundrel—down into the abyss with him!"

Their intention was fearfully apparent. The two women screamed with terror, and implored that they desist from their dreadful purpose. Their cries were unheeded. The enraged Frenchmen were pushing their intended victim to the verge of the gulf. But he struggled like a madman. He clutched the baluster with the tenacity of desperation. His clothes were torn into shreds, the blood was trickling from his face and hands. But his efforts were fruitless against the combined strength of three sturdy young men. At last he begged for mercy.

"What! You speak of mercy, despicable hangman! Did you show mercy to him? Did you not torture him for years, torture him to death? No mercy for such as you!"

They raised him above the balustrade. In three seconds more he would be a mangled, blood-bespattered corpse at the bottom of the horrible pit. But the lady of the inn sank upon her knees, grasped the hand of the blonde cavalier, and again lifted her prayers.

"Kind gentlemen, have pity! I am a poor, friendless woman, and were you to perpetrate this deed you would make beggars of me and my child. We live only from the spare earnings we derive from visitors to the grotto, and the day after the murder became known we would be homeless, houseless and starving. I beseech you, messieurs, have mercy!"

Marietta united her prayers with those of her mother. The young men hesitated, paused—they were evidently moved. For several moments they deliberated amongst themselves, and finally their leader said:

"Be it so—we will spare your miserable life. But one punishment you must receive, wretch. Up with you—en avant—march!"

They drove the trembling, tottering man before them to the opening of the cave, to the inn. Arrived here, one of the young men brought the register book, opened it, and turning to the last written page, said:

"In this book are the names of many honorable people; yours must not remain among them—it is a filthy taint to its pages. Wipe it out—quick, sir!"

The maltreated stranger seized a pen, dipped it into the ink, and was on the point of striking out his name therewith.

"Oho! that will not do," cried the Frenchmen—"you must lick it off, lick it away with that venomous tongue which has uttered so many vile and cruel commands."

They forced him to kneel before the table, and as he hesitated to comply with their bidding they threatened him anew with terrible wrath. The abject creature at last obeyed, and—with his tongue annihilated all trace of his name from the book!

This done, the Frenchmen hurled him out of doors. Then they paid and departed, taking the road back to Sallenches. They did not write their names in the book. Marietta and her mother had read the name of the misused Englishman before it was effaced. It was—

"Sir Hudson Lowe."

The jailer of Napoleon Bonaparte at St. Helena.

* * *

That evening, people from Sallenches came down to the cabaret, as was their wont. Said one of them to the hostess and her daughter, during the course of the conversation:

"You had distinguished company at the grotto today."

"They did not make themselves known to us, however," rejoined Marietta, gazing with eager inquisitiveness at the speaker.

"Then I will inform you who they are," said the peasant. "After leaving the inn this afternoon they returned to Sallenches, partook of some bread and milk, and departed at once for Geneva. That busybody, my wife, found them out by judicious maneuvring. Two of them were French cavaliers of good family; the third a young Prince Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte!"

Aye! the blonde young gentleman was the Nephew of his Uncle—was him who subsequently became the Man of Sedan, the Prisoner of Wilhelmshohee, and the Exile of Chiselhurst!

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

In this vast world of ours we but worry and tug,
Do scarce else but strive to be happy and snug;
You may say what you please—as long as we're here,
That's the long and the short of our earthly career.
But all will agree with me, as we jog through
We must do just exactly as other folks do.

We must eat, drink and sleep, laugh, dance and sing,
Be merry or sad, and all that sort of thing—
We must cringe to the rich and frown on the poor,
Look with awe on the wise and with pity at the boor,
Throw away the old fashion and take up the new—
Yes, do just exactly as other folks do.

If dear Mrs. Darling should sport a new bonnet
A foot or more high, with a Cupid upon it,
And a voluminous dress with twenty yards' trail,
A necklace of diamonds, a Brussels lace veil,
We must envy her taste, or get the same too—
Yes, do just exactly as other folks do.

And suppose not an atom of comfort you feel
With a boot on your foot with a very high heel,
And a toe that will measure an inch from the nail,
And a hat with a wide brim or no brim at all—
No matter, you must wear them. What's that to you?
You must do just exactly as other folks do.

Should your well-to-do neighbor give a big shine
With viands delicious and soujuitive wine,
You must get things on tick, or some such a game,
Or borrow the money, and e'en do the same;
Though you're deeply in debt, with bills over due,
You must do just exactly as other folks do.

As you cannot stay single the whole of your life,
Remember this well in selecting a wife:
'Tween a rich and a poor one you will have to choose—
Don't hesitate long, but the poor one refuse;
Take the one, if you can, who is rich as a Jew,
And do just exactly as other folks do.

When you visit your friends, take very good care
To observe that they really have "nothing to wear,"
That the carpets are seedy, the harp out of tune—
Note well all their errors, and ridicule some.
With others upon it, though you know it's not true,
And do just exactly as other folks do.

In driving a bargain

in his second turn, he doing as pleasing a contortion act as we've ever seen—scratching his nose with his toe, putting his head in his pocket, sitting down comfortably on the top of his shell, drinking a glass of water through his ... rolling up and putting himself away on a shelf, and various other little eccentricities which we'd rather see others do than do ourselves; and which we'd much sooner not see at all.

P. S.—A long piece of string is tied around the cage of the lion in this establishment. This being the case, mothers need not worry about the possibility of their children being swallowed alive by the monster, as the string is drawn tight, and the ravenous cuss of a beast couldn't more than devour a child's head before he would be discovered!

NEW YORK CLIPPER.

SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1873.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞Letters seeking information replied to only through this department: no answers by mail.

E. D. H., Cuthbert.—We would not advise you to make the venture, as there is no money in it, even though your man can do all you claim for him. The public have been gulled so often that they cannot be induced to extend paying patronage to such exhibitions, and you would only be losing money by engaging in such a speculation. Nobody here would touch it. The party to whom you allude in your letter by name we regard as a mountebank, and the reports of his extraordinary performances are not reliable. The fastest time in which 100 miles have been walked is 17½ hours, exclusive of 1¼ hours' stoppage, by Capt. Barclay, from Ury to Crathynaird and back, Scotland, in 1806.

S. F., Croton.—1. Billy Edwards and Arthur Chambers fought once only. Their second match was declared off by mutual consent at the time fixed for posting the second deposit. 2. No; Mace was performing in London, Eng., at last advices. 3. George Seddons beat Barry the Kid, Tommy Kelly, Punch Morris and Johnny Lafferty, and was beaten by Pete Dailey. 4. In the first inning of the cricket match between the English Eleven and the American Twenty-two at Boston, Mass., last fall, W. G. Grace scored 26 runs; in the second inning he made 5.

A. S., Galveston, Texas.—1. She is living in England. 2. In England. 3. A straight flush does not count at all unless agreed upon before the game commences. Under such conditions it would beat four aces. 4. One mile in 1m. 42¾s. 5. The fastest time by ocean steamers from New York to Queenstown was made in 7 days 20h. 24m. by the City of Brussels. 6. Cannot say at present.

Boxiana.—1. Your friend is wrong. Col. Kerrigan is no relation to Jim Kerrigan the boxer. 2. Bob Smith of Liverpool beat the Liverpool Greyhound, Harry Burgess, Harry Allen (twice) and the latter's brother, now residing at St. Louis, Mo. 3. You can obtain a copy of "Fistiana" by applying to Ed. James, who advertises; price, $2.50.

J. H. M., Jr., Washington.—1. There are no regular rules, and custom must govern. G, who threw 40, has no claim whatever to a prize; the parties throwing 41 being entitled to second and third prizes. 2. Any protest against the authority of the committee cannot now be entertained.

Buffalo Willie.—1. The stage-manager casts the pieces with the assistance of the star's advice. 2. They rehearse on Mondays, unless the distance they have to travel is so great that they cannot arrive in season. In such cases they open in a piece which they have previously acted with the company.

Harry Clifton.—If the bet was simply that the Gracie would win, the man so betting won, according to the decision of the judges. The fact of the Vision having completed the distance in less time has nothing to do with it, the Gracie winning on time allowance.

Newburgh.—Subsequent to their defeat at Saratoga by the Ward Brothers, the Taylor-Winship and Tyne crews of England rowed in the regatta at Longueil (near Montreal), Canada, Sept. 14, and the Tyne four also participated in the regatta held at Quebec Sept. 20, 1871.

J. H. C., Washington.—The longest standing jump, level ground, on record, is 13ft. 5¾in., by Ed. Searles, the present champion. 2. The longest running jump on record is 29ft. 7in., by Jack Howard, in England. 3. We are not aware that he performed such a feat.

D. L., Lawrence.—1. There is no restriction. 2. You need not give the manager's name. Your letter was properly addressed. 3. We have none there. 4. He does not travel with the show all the time, but has a great many persons to represent him. 3. There is no charge for addressing letters in care of The Clipper.

A. H. S.—In the absence of rules on the subject, custom must govern. Therefore, the five persons who each threw 41 must throw over again for the second and third prizes, the two highest throwers taking them. The thrower of 40 has no claim whatever to a prize.

W. G., Brooklyn.—Straights differ in value in different localities; in some they are not played at all; in others they beat two pair, and again in others three of a kind. Their value ought to be understood before commencing play.

Ball Tosser, Philad'a.—A—who bet that the Philadelphia would make more runs in one inning than the Resolute would make in the entire game—loses, because the former's highest score in one inning was but three, which was not more than the Resolute made.

J. M., Boston.—1. Goldsmith Maid has never beaten Dexter in a race, having only once trotted against him, when he won. But she has beaten his best time of 2:17¼, having trotted in 2:16¾. 2. Geo. Wright was born in this country.

R. E. P.—1. Banting's Treatise can be obtained of any bookseller; price 25 cents. The system is the avoidance in diet of sugar, milk, butter, potatoes, pork, salmon, ale, champagne, etc. 2. See James Martin & Son's, Boston, advertisement on our last page.

Brute, Indianapolis.—1.—They have been beaten occasionally. 2. We know nothing of the concern named. 3. Which of the several parties of that name on the stage do you mean? 4. From $1,000 upwards. 5. From $25 upwards weekly.

Eucherist, Duncannon.1. If his opponent had not led, A could declare to go alone, even if his partner had discarded. 2. Your opponent cannot order you up after you have taken up the trump, so as to prevent you making a lone hand.

Wilkins, Washington.—1. Many jewelers who call themselves first-class deal in paste jewelry. 2. From $10 upwards, according to style and setting. 3. If the decree of divorce is absolute, then neither the boy nor the husband can inherit the property unless it is willed to them.

C. K. & Co., Boston.—The losses by the great Chicago fire were estimated at over $250,000,000, and the estimated losses by the conflagration in Boston last November were about $90,000,000.

B. J. C. H., Boston, Mass.—1. From $20 per week upward, according to merit and reputation. 2. It is not published, but almost any leader of the band in a variety theatre can sell you a copy.

C. E. H.—The alterations have not improved it. See how unpoetic these alleged rhymes would look in print; Tall and halls; fronts and months; book and work; chime and divine; wander and comer, etc.

O. W., Dover.—1. We cannot give you the exact figures, but the population of London, Eng., in 1870, was over 3,300,000. 2. The best walking time on record for eight miles is 59:39 by Geo. Topley, in England.

Captain Jack, New Orleans.—Dexter's time has been beaten by Goldsmith Maid twice when trotting against Lucy. American Girl trotted a heat in 2:17¼ at Buffalo, when going against Goldsmith Maid, Lucy and Henry.

O. F. P., Medford.—Fifty dollar octagonal gold pieces were coined in California, but we believe they were issued by private parties and not from the United States mint.

F. H. S., Washington.—In the Baltimore victories are counted games won from the Maryland and Washington nines. Taking the character of the contests into consideration, the Bostons have the best record.

Hotel-keeper.—According to the last census New York had a population of 942,292; Philadelphia, 674,022; Boston, 250,526; Baltimore, 267,354; Chicago, 298,977; St. Louis, 310,864; Cincinnati, 216,239.

J. H. L., Quebec.—There is no Thomas Herman, cabinet-maker, in either directory, but there is a George Herman, of that trade, whose place of business is 390 Court street, Brooklyn.

S. S. P.—When a bet is made on a match, it is generally understood as being on the basis of nine innings having to be played, unless there is a special understanding otherwise.

K. C. Williams.—You have not the privilege of picking out five innings, but must abide by the result of the first five played by those clubs in the match upon which you bet.

Post Office Clerk.—It would require too much space to fully explain the difference. By consulting a dictionary you can get a slight idea. "Divorce" is properly speaking a comedy-drama.

New Yorker.—1. Mr. Chamberlin's Club-house is open every season at Long Branch; it is near the West End Hotel. 2. Morrissey's Club-house at Saratoga will be open this Summer.

J. M. O., Chicago.—1. Gen. Grant resigned his position as General of the army on his inauguration as President, March 4, 1869. 2. B, who bet that it was not twenty minutes past 10 o'clock, loses.

E. D. T., St. Louis.—We have no statistics to answer from, but should say that New York is the most closely built, and contains the greatest number of inhabitants to the square mile of all the cities in the United States.

A. F. G.—1. Write to the Goodyear Rubber Manufacturing Company, Naugatuck, Ct. 2. There was no music for it.

R. D., Newark.—M, who cut the jack, wins the deal. At euchre the highest card deals, and the jack beats the king.

Old Times Rocks.—In a race (running) of mile heats, best two in three, 40 yards are a distance, the same as in mile heats, best three in five.

Tommy B., Louisville.—It is, probably, a match made up by the parties to gull and rob the public. Have nothing to do with it.

G. B. C., Brocton.—The Erie Railroad Company have machine shops and works at Jersey City, Susquehanna and Port Jervis.

Traveler.—E loses his bet. M can build on E's build of 7 and make it 10, but if E had built "sevens" he could not build on it, or take it with any other card than a 7.

S. M., Phila.—W. F. Cody is entitled to the appellation Honorable, in consequence of being a member of the Kansas Legislature.

Thespis, Covington.—Write to Ed. James, as per his advertisement, and inclose a stamp for return postage, and he will send you a catalogue of such plays.

Brockville.—We do not know sufficient of the firm to give an opinion. If you are in doubt, give yourself the benefit of that doubt.

Slams, Philadelphia.—Unless you ordered up the trump, you could not play it alone; and if you obtained three tricks you can only score two for the euchre.

One in Trouble, Columbus.—1. Under such circumstances you are not obliged to marry her. 2. A velvet coat would be very much out of place.

C. H. S., Gouverneur.—1. From $35 per week upward, according to skill. 2. Certainly not. 3. No. 4. Closed for the season.

H. J. M., Lebanon.—There are several games of pool, to describe any one of which would require more space than we can spare.

Continental, Newark, N. J.—Helen Western died at Washington, D. C., Dec. 11, 1868. Lucille Western is alive and residing in Charlestown, Mass.

C. A. W.—There is no one player who excels in all points, and therefore in a general sense we cannot decide the question.

Miss H. D., Philad'a.—1. They may be used if not copyrighted. 2. The costume is more a matter of taste than of rule.

J. E., Poplar street.—You had better make your own rules, as those in force with troupes here might be inoperative in yours.

Constant Reader, Memphis.—You are mistaken. The cards must be played out; and if both players are game, it is a stand off.

Chas. J. Eccles, Henderson.—1. No letters. 2. They may contend for a purse, but it is not probable that they will make another match.

Minerva, New Orleans, La.—The last we heard of her she was in San Francisco, Cal. A letter addressed in care of The Clipper should reach her.

G. W. O.—1. There is no truth in the rumor. See her picture and biography in the present issue. 2. Did not show there.

Regular Reader, Waukesha.—A euchre at three-handed euchre scores two points for each of the opposing players.

A Smart, Ontario.—If a player calls for a high ball and hits at a low one, balls must be called if the ball he calls for is not sent in.

Enquirer.—1. American Girl trotted a mile heat at Buffalo in 2:17¼. 2. The feat of throwing a double summersault on horseback has never been done.

Syno.—At euchre, a player is not obliged to head the trick; he could therefore play his 7 of trumps on his opponent's 10 of trumps.

Sensation, Philadelphia.—Either advertise it or address letters to the various stars playing that line of business.

Greenhorn, Decatur, Ill.—1. Some business college in Chicago, Ill. See Chicago papers. 2 and 3. Cannot say, though they may be good. 4. We believe not.

H. Mac.—After A had declared to go alone, B could not go alone against him; and if he euchres A, he scores 2 points for such euchre.

James Donovan.—George Topley walked 8 miles in 59:39, which is the best record for one hour. It was done at London, Eng.

Runner, Titusville.—1. You can obtain such a book upon application to Ed. James, who advertises. 2. Light, very low-cut shoes, with two spikes in the sole, are the best.

A Friend, Binghamton.—For positive information upon the subject write to Chas. B. Elliott, Greenpoint, L. I., and E. Waters & Sons, Troy, N. Y.

Typo.—1. The Daily Telegraph has a much larger circulation than The London (Eng.) Times. 2. We cannot give you the figures.

R. B. D., Columbia.—1. We can send you the paper. 2. It depends upon how badly a purchaser wants them. An advertisement would cost about sixty cents.

J. F. S., Janesville.—The population of Newark, N. J., according to the last census, was 105,059.

C. G. G., Washington.—The thrower of 40 has no claim on the third prize. See answer to A. H. S.

D. M.—We believe that the gentleman is, but we know that the lady is not.

Wallace & Norton.—There are more Protestants than Catholics in the United States.

C. W. N. R., Wallace.—At cribbage, a player making 31 scores two points.

R. L. R., St. Louis.—Three 5's and a queen in hand and a 5 turned up count 28.

Yankee, St. Louis.—If a player takes the responsibility of ordering up the dealer without a trump, he can do so.

M. Y., Little Rock.—A misdeal at casino entails the loss of the game and all depending on it.

Philo, ...—There is no ... in the New York City Directory.

E. T. H., ...—Your ... is wrong; you can have two hands on the table at one time.

Wild ..., Indianapolis.—You can certainly call them Derby ...

J. R., Chicago.—A had a right to score his jack, bunch the cards, and deal again.

J. P. B.—Joseph Jefferson never acted Rip Van Winkle at the Bowery Theatre.

E. F. F., St. Louis, Mo.—In vol. 20, No. 49, a notice of the death of Neil Rogers may be seen.

G. C. M., Lowell.—If you know when you are well off, you will have nothing to do with them.

W. W. G., St. Louis.—Thank you for the picture of "the boys."

J. W. R., St. Louis.—They fought twice. To which battle do you refer?

L. Y. S., Boston.—1. Yes, unless he had one hand on the floor also. 2. Yes.

M. K., Philadelphia.—Hyer and Sullivan fought on the 7th of February, 1849.

Barney, Vicksburg.—Thank you, but we do not require one.

Regular Customer, Independence.—C's high and low goes out before A's jack.

J. W. B., Erie.—A man who bets on a dead sure thing wins, provided he has not employed fraud.

R. P., Stanton.—We can probably replace your missing numbers.

Geo A. Rea.—Yes; the lady called for the letter on May 28.

W. R. B., Princeville.—The jack is scored as soon as turned, even if it be of the suit previously run.

J. M. C.—He can refuse to allow an overweight ball or one under size, or one not marked by maker's name, etc.

A Ballplayer.—Write to Ferguson, care of A. R. Samuels—he can provide you with a catcher.

A. W., Bridgeport.—Blue Gown won the English Derby in 1868.

E. K. L., Wilmington.—Items of interest will be thankfully received.

J. B. S., Norwalk.—We shall not need one. Photo received.

X. Z. V. Q., Philadelphia, Pa.—1. Kelly. 2. He was, and acquitted.

Nautilus, Philadelphia.—We published a song entitled "The Increase of Thirst" in Clipper dated April 26.

Yank Sullivan, Schenectady.—The height of John McMahon, the wrestler, is about 5 feet 11 inches.

L. L. D.—They are all living, but have retired from the profession.

J. M. C., Portland.—It was a live lion trained for that purpose.

Interested, Wilmington.—We do not know whether the drawing took place or not.

J. M., West Philadelphia.—The player on the immediate left of the dealer has the lead.

Scruple, Philadelphia.—At cribbage, twice around the board, the player must get out of the last hole.

Marble Yard.—1. We believe not. 2. The Philadelphia. 3. Cuthbert.

E. Tiggs.—No; the rule is explicit to the contrary, as we have frequently stated.

Benedict.—A must have a show for his money, $1,25 being all that he has left.

S. D., Washington.—Dexter's best time for one mile is 2:17¼. Goldsmith Maid's, 2:16¾.

ADVERTISING AMUSEMENTS.

Under despotic forms of government the tradition is enforced that "his royal nibbs" the king holds his power by divine right. It is a pleasant fiction, about on a par with the absurd notion which obtains in this country to the effect that all our people are sovereigns, when in point of fact many of them are scoundrels and some of them are scavengers. But whatever may be said of the divine right of kings or the sovereignty of the people, it is certain that the claim to royalty in the show business rests on the basis of printers' ink. The Prince of Showmen was not born to the purple. He established his title, and built his palace, and filled his exchequer, and secured his retainers, all by means of judicious advertising. The generous public kindly permits the giver of amusements to estimate his own worth and position; and if he but estimate them highly enough, they usually concur in his verdict. We speak no parables: the greatest showman is the showman who makes the greatest announcements—who advertises most; for it follows as a natural sequence that if he advertise much he must have much to advertise. Few men are such fools that they will deliberately invite attention to that which is not worth seeing; but many possessing that which is worth seeing fail to invite attention to it by adequate advertising.

We suppose Jenny Lind was a great singer. It would be treason to the memories which haunt the minds of all who saw her on her first appearance at Castle Garden to say that she was not the Queen of the Lyric Stage. It is wellnigh a quarter of a century ago that her grand debut was made in this city. Advertising was in its infancy. Singing was the uncertain expedient whereby doubtful artists gained a precarious livelihood. High prices, for anything in the line of amusements, were unknown. And yet Jenny Lind sang to a sixteen thousand dollar house—to more money than was ever paid before or since for a single performance in this country or Europe. The tickets were sold at auction. The man who paid the highest price was a hat and fur dealer. He did it as an advertisement, and, considering the trade which it brought him, it was a very good investment. We recall an epigram, written at the time, which sums up his case:

"Don't think there was any revealing
Of a heart which could easily melt;
It was not a matter of feeling,
But simply a matter of felt."

The whole triumph of Jenny Lind was the legitimate fruit of advertising. Unquestionably she was a good singer; but of all the multitudes who attended her concerts not more than one in a hundred had ever heard her name before her advent to these shores. If she had appeared unheralded, unadvertised, she would have sung to empty benches. If she had been moderately advertised, she would have achieved moderate success. She was overwhelmingly advertised, and therefore her triumph was overwhelming. It was a simple sum in progression, which Mr. Barnum solved to his own profit and satisfaction.

We do not wish to be understood as intimating that the mere spreading of printers' ink is a passport to success in the management of amusements. Advertising is a fine art. Mike Walsh used to say that it required more education to cross Broadway in a crowd than to teach school in the country; and it certainly requires more genius to advertise a show properly than to do either of the other things. No rules can be laid down for the guidance of advertisers; but the effect of all good advertising is to excite the reader's wonder and pique his curiosity. A mistaken notion prevails in some quarters that unpronounceable polysyllabic nomenclature—big words coined from doubtful Greek roots with bastard Latin terminations—may be usefully employed in advertising. We think that idea has been carried too far already. The best advertiser is not he who airs his own learning most, but he who arrests the reader's attention by a direct appeal to the reader's taste or fancy. For instance, thirty-six years ago the gentleman who is now the greatest merchant in the world—Mr. A. T. Stewart of this city—captivated half the trading population by the simple announcement that he was "selling out at cost." The phrase has been worn so threadbare in latter years that it is no longer available. It has done such extensive service that the children of this generation can hardly believe that it was ever new. But its use by Mr. Stewart was wholly original. It was during the panic of 1837 that he started the novel advertisement. He actually sold goods at their original cost, but he was enabled to buy them much below cost from the merchants who had failed or were failing.

These cases of Messrs. P. T. Barnum and A. T. Stewart illustrate boldness and skill in advertising. They are selected because each was the first of its kind, and because each led the way to great achievements. Showmen will hardly fail to appreciate the lesson they teach. Bold advertisers must have something worth advertising, or no continued success will follow their efforts. A show possessing no merit whatsoever will draw a large house "for one night only" if it be skillfully advertised, but the man who thus gulls the public would best keep shady for all subsequent time. It is nearly a dozen years since a bogus wizard filled the papers with announcements of a performance which he was to give at the old Academy of Music. It was just after Hermann had completed his first successful season of prestidigitation. This pretender beat Hermann in advertising. He completely captivated the public by his amazing promises. Finally the evening of the performance dawned, and the Academy was crowded with a brilliant audience who had purchased tickets at a high price. What followed is well remembered by showmen in this city, and is a tradition among the profession everywhere. The bungler was hissed from the stage. But he cleared a thousand dollars by the operation, and fairly illustrated what might be called the brute-strength of advertising.

The successful and judicious advertiser will never yield a point to a competitor. If he finds that it requires a full page of a newspaper to set forth the merits of a rival concern, he will also have his full page, and will endeavor to make it bristle with sharper points and abound in warmer adjectives. Nor will he be content to rest on his laurels at any time. No matter how large his business, how flattering his prospects may be, he will continue to advertise as if he had just embarked in a new venture and had still a name to make. Any letting-up on the part of the manager in this particular is construed by the public into a sign that business is falling off, and that he has found it necessary to curtail expenses.

The Clipper, in offering these hints and suggestions in regard to advertising, is governed by no selfish motive. We are abundantly satisfied with the advertising favors showered upon us by our innumerable patrons. But an experience extending over a score of years has taught us that the value to showmen of advertising liberally can hardly be overestimated. Many an entertainment of excellence which languishes now for want of support could be pushed into paying prosperity by the free use of printers' ink. No manager can afford to forget that the Prince of Showmen is the Prince of Advertisers.

More Trouble.—Much rather would we be a young man and go West, than submit to the abuse that is being showered upon the author of "The New Magdalen." The Arcadian, for example, is credited with consigning him to a place among "those pitiful pleaders for vice, the myoptic persons." As not one person in 500,000,000 can truly say that he knows what myoptic means, about nine-tenths of mankind will jump to the conclusion that this "big word" is meant to imply that Wilkie Collins is either a horse-thief or a bond-robber. If his traducer meant simply that Wilkie was "no good," how much more intelligible it would have been to have said that he was "all in my-eye and Betty Martin." But possibly it meant to use the word myopic, and in that event it should have said "short-sighted" and had done with it. The use of unfamiliar terms, in ventilation of verbal knowledge, is fraught with danger. We once knew a man who, called in print a "phlebographist" (he had simply laid open a human vein or two), purchased a pistol and jumped out upon the war-path in vindication of his parents' purity. It so happened that this "phlebographist" had been born in wedlock; and it will be strange if Wilkie Collins, who has resolved to go West, is not heard from anent this mysterious word, this legicographer's sphynk, myoptic.

Filthy New York.—They say it is a pernicious bird that fouls its own nest. Just so. For weeks past several of our daily papers have been dishing up column on column of matter regarding the dirty state of our streets, and the unhealthy condition of the city; and these reports are being disseminated throughout the country by journals only too ready to copy anything calculated to injure us. That New York City is in a better sanitary condition this season than during the same time last year may be seen from the fact that the number of deaths here last week numbered four hundred and eighty-six, while for the corresponding term of 1872 the number was five hundred and sixty. If, therefore, the city is dirty, its population must thrive on filth.

All Alive!—Lots of sport last week, and everybody happy except those who sank in the pools. What with horse racing and trotting, yachting, baseballing, picnic parties, clam chowder excursions, etc., we have well-nigh had a surfeit for one week. The season has only commenced, however, and the beginning augurs well for gay times in and around the metropolis. But don't go too deep into the pools—"all that glitters is not gold"—keep your wits about you, and don't be drawn into the vortex by conniving speculators.

Justice at Last.—It is with sincere pleasure we learn that justice is properly administered, somewhere, if not in New York. Illustration—an Iowa judge lately fined a man five dollars for snatching a paper from a newsboy. "Our Jim" reminds us that in this city "the snatching" is all done by the newsboys, as many a man is still waiting for his change out of a half dollar.

Curious Hen Case.—Out in Jackson, Tenn., there is a hen that daily deposits an egg in one of the bank vaults. This is no doubt true, but some day the removal of those deposits will be made the excuse for some thief to "break in and steal the gold."

"Our Jim" wants to know whether Tom Nast, who after taking off everybody else took himself off, is related to Jim Nast, about whom he has heard so much. We don't know, but it is certain that Tom's a-nast-onishing artist.

A Texas paper predicts that ere long "that State will loom up and dwarf the old States of the Atlantic seaboard." Probably when she "gets in the weaving way."

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

⁂ As we go to press a dispatch from Dublin, Ireland, says that a great fire is in progress there, and that the efforts of the firemen are to a great extent rendered futile by a crowd of persons whose object is plunder. At one time they stoned not only the firemen, but also a detachment of soldiers called in to preserve order. One of the stones hit the mayor of the city. The military charged upon the mob, wounding many. The scene is represented as fearful, and intense excitement prevails. The fire has already done damage to the extent of $100,000.

⁂ Concerning the investigation into the Polaris mystery, a telegram from Washington states that, despite the efforts of the Navy Department towards secrecy, it has cropped out that Captain Buddington was the main cause of the failure of the expedition, as well as of the disruption of the party, deliberately deserting that portion of it subsequently rescued from the floe of ice. The story is not generally credited.

⁂ Peter Kenny on June 9 got into an altercation with an unknown man, who shot him, inflicting a dangerous wound. The authorities have imprisoned Joseph Coburn the pugilist as a witness, he having been the first to give information to the police. All three were in a Third-avenue car. The two wranglers were unknown to Coburn, who got out of the car to see fair-play in what promised to be simply a bout at fisticuffs.

⁂ The first reception of President McMahon was held on the 5th inst., the representatives of all the foreign powers being present except Count Von Arnim, the German ambassador, whose absence was construed in certain circles as a forecast of renewed complications between France and Germany.

⁂ In the case of Joshua Nicholson, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Lampley, the Maryland Court of Appeals on June 6 affirmed the ruling of the Court below. It is thought that Hollohan and Nicholson, who were tried jointly, and the former of whom was sentenced to die June 13, will be hung together.

⁂ At Hazleton, Penn., on the 5th inst., a ruffian named Henry Stanfenberg entered the house of a widow named Reilly and demanded money. Being refused, he stabbed and beat her, also assaulting a small girl living in the house, as well as a lady neighbor. He then fled, leaving Mrs. Reilly in a most critical condition.

⁂ In a proclamation to the army President MacMahon says: "The choice of a President of the Republic from your ranks shows the confidence of the National Assembly in your loyalty." He has appointed Gen. Ladmirault to the command of the Army of Versailles.

⁂ On the 4th inst., at a barn-raising in Holmdell, Monmouth Co., N. J., two men were killed and seven others severely injured. The accident was due to rotten timbers, which gave way and allowed the frame of the barn to fall in.

⁂ A telegram from the straits of Malacca, received June 4, states that one of the Dutch men-of-war cruising off the northern coast of Sumatra fired into three British merchant vessels as they were leaving the harbor of Atcheen.

⁂ On the morning of June 3 the French steamship Ville du Havre ran into and sank the Canadian bark Curacoa, lying at anchor in the Swash Channel, directly in the course of incoming steamers. Passengers and crew saved. Loss on cargo and vessel, about $40,000.

⁂ The steamship Drummond Castle, while on a voyage from Hankow to London, went ashore off the east coast of China and became a total wreck. The report that thirty persons had been drowned is contradicted; no lives were lost, says a dispatch June 4.

⁂ Charles R. Henderson, on trial for the killing of Dr. Merryman Cole on Jan. 6 last, was on the 5th inst. acquitted. The case being submitted without argument, the jury within five minutes brought in a verdict of not guilty.

⁂ At Hamilton, Nevada, on June 5, W. Carey, seeing P. W. Benefit approaching him with a pistol, seized a shot-gun and blew off the top of Benefit's head. There had been trouble between Benefit's wife and Carey's sister.

⁂ On the 4th inst., Dr. Duvall of the Naval Hospital, Annapolis, Md., deliberately followed and shot two marines who had been gathering wild strawberries on the government farm. Neither is likely to die, but a court-martial will be ordered.

⁂ About an hour before the time fixed for the execution of Mordecai and Griffin, the North Carolina murderers, there was received at the Raleigh jail a communication from the Governor commuting their sentences to imprisonment for life.

⁂ On the 4th, two soldiers were wounded in a dance-house in Wachita, Kans. The following morning it was burned down by a party of soldiers, who, in putting the inmates to flight, wounded one man mortally and the keeper of the house slightly.

⁂ Thomas Wright (colored), who murdered the pedlar Rogerski, was hung at Washington on the 5th inst. Wright's brother, who had journeyed from Portland, Me., made the singular request to be allowed to put the rope around the condemned man's neck—a request that was not acceded to.

⁂ John E. Simmons, coming into Court on crutches, was on June 6 arraigned in the Oyer and Terminer for the murder of Nicholas Duryea. Owing to the illness of John Graham, his senior counsel, his trial was deferred until after the 17th inst.

⁂ Near Albion, N. Y., on the 5th inst., a Spaniard, who has since given his name as George Jaul, entered the house of a Mrs. Gage, and stabbed her and cut her throat. He then fled, leaving her for dead, but she has since recognized him.

⁂ The inquest in the case of Mrs. Rosa Connity of Binghampton has resulted in a verdict that she died of wounds inflicted from time to time by her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Canning. The prisoner is thirty-five years old, and her inhumanity is attributed to love of drink.

⁂ Near Franklin, Can., June 4, a train on the Midland Railway ran off the track, causing the death of two men and considerable damage to some of the cars and their contents. Lent's Circus and Menagerie was attached to the train.

⁂ A freight-train on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Indianapolis Railroad ran over and killed five cattle, June 5. The accident slightly injured the fireman and front brakeman. The engineer, whose name was Howe, was so severely injured that he died on the following day.

⁂ On the 7th inst., while Murray's Circus was en route from Hudson to Boston on the Fitchburg (Mass.) Railroad, an attempt was made to throw the train off the track. The head-light enabled the engineer to see the obstructions in time to stop the train.

⁂ Senor Pierrad, Spanish Minister of War, has resigned. The Carlists, who hold a portion of the Northern Railway, receive $200 per day from the company in consideration of permitting a resumption of travel.

⁂ With regard to the rival mail-service claims of the White Star and the Inman lines of European steamers, U. S. Postmaster-general Creswell decided on June 5 in favor of the White Star.

⁂ Gov. Jewell of Connecticut has accepted his appointment as minister to Russia. On the 2d inst. ex-Congressman John A. Bingham of Ohio was appointed minister to Japan, vice De Long, suspended.

⁂ On June 1, Capt. Jack of the Modocs, accompanied by two of his warriors, five squaws and seven children, surrendered to the U. S. forces under Gen. Jefferson C. Davis.

⁂ John McHalpin, convicted of burglary and also of assault with intent to kill, was sentenced on June 4, in the Kings County Court of Sessions, to thirty years in Sing Sing.

⁂ While lying at her dock at Hamilton, Can., June 3, the propeller City of Chatham was burned to the water's edge. Seven hundred barrels of flour were also consumed. Value of vessel, $32,000.

⁂ Horace Venable, the negro who about two weeks ago murdered Mary Holmes by knocking her into the canal at Richmond, Va., was on June 4 convicted of murder in the first degree.

⁂ Joseph Andrea, who in Syracuse, N. Y., March 15, stabbed Henry Smultz while quarreling over a game of cards, was on June 4 convicted of manslaughter in the third degree.

⁂ At the Sturtevant House, in this city, June 3, Frank H. Walworth, aged nineteen, shot and killed his father, Mansfield Tracy Walworth, an author of repute. Cause, family grievances.

⁂ A band of desperadoes surrounded the jail at Waco, Texas, June 3; and after locking up the keepers, they liberated all the prisoners—twelve in number, and several of them notorious characters.

⁂ A dispatch from Shanghai states that at the capture of the city of Tali-fee, in the province of Yunnan, Southwestern China, by the Imperial Chinese army, 30,000 prisoners were massacred. The Sultan took his own life.

⁂ A fire at Middletown, N. Y., June 5, destroyed the planing mill and sash-and-blind factory of Theodore Wilkes, Steinhardt's saloon, and the Cooper Institute Hotel. Loss, $35,000; partially insured.

⁂ John Wilson, a Philadelphia packing-box manufacturer, has absconded after borrowing $30,000 from his friends. His difficulties were due to a mania for gambling.

⁂ A fire at Peterboro, Can., June 6, destroyed Ryan's tannery and outhouses, Bradburn's building, Cavanagh's stable and contents, and the stable of ... Estate. Loss, $15,000; insurance, [illegible].

⁂ The members of the National Brewers' Convention closed on the 5th their session at Cleveland, O., the object of which was to urge the repeal of all "unnecessary and vexatious laws" directed against malt liquors.

⁂ Near Sandusky, O., on the 7th inst., a stock train and a gravel train collided, more or less injuring six men, one of whom died shortly afterward. About fifteen cattle and two hundred and fifty sheep were killed or injured.

⁂ On the 5th inst., in Boston, Andrew Eagan and Thomas Halehan, both employed on The Herald of that city, got into a dispute in the street, when Eagan stabbed Halehan, who will probably die.

⁂ At Fort Dodge, Ia., on the 7th inst., there was a riot in consequence of an attempt to arrest a saloon-keeper named Haines, who in the melee was accidentally killed by his own pistol.

⁂ Richard Brockway, mate of the schooner Samuel Weller, was killed June 4, by the breaking away of the hoisting apparatus, while unloading at this port.

⁂ John Fork, a cigar maker, was on June 3, in this city, convicted of stealing ten cents, and sentenced to State Prison for five years, with hard labor.

⁂ Two firemen were seriously and three slightly injured by a falling wall during a fire in Elm street, this city, June 3.

⁂ The Osage Indians have attacked the herds, and also killed and scalped a man named Chambers, on the new Ellsworth trail, Kansas.

⁂ Near Westerly, R. I., on the 5th inst., a dastardly attempt was made to throw from the track a train on the Shore Line Railroad. Fortunately, it failed.

WARD, Alexander—Twice represented this city in the Assembly—here, June 7.

SQUIBS AND THINGS.

—The Arkansawyers insist upon it that outside barbarians shall speak of their State as *Ark*ansaw, and not as Arkansas. As it is their undoubted privilege to cherish the old saw in preference to other people's sas—as, in punless fact, etymology casts whatever weight it possesses against the modern and in favor of the ancient pronunciation—let the final s in Arkansas be forever silent the world over, and the last a be universally accorded the broad sound of that vowel. The people thereaway demand it, and the people of Arkansas are supreme; for is not the State motto Regnant populi?

BILLIARDS.

BESSUNGER vs. UBASSY.

The Former Winner of the Series—Ubassy Runs 117.

The third of the series of games between Francois Ubassy and John Bessunger was played at the Globe Theatre, Chicago, on the night of the 5th inst. The first game, in which Ubassy gave the odds of discount in a string of 400, was played on the 29th ult., and was scored as follows:

Bessunger—4 9 7 0 2 10 8 2 0 10 1 0 23 14 23 0 16 1 11 5 8 38 0 6 1 7 6 22 1 4 12 14 0 3 3 4 1 0 0 0 36 2 0 0 4 7 2 2 1 0 0 7 5 1 1—400. Average, 7.3-11.

Ubassy—0 1 2 9 0 4 0 0 0 2 8 3 4 7 0 1 2 0 1 0 0 1 0 3 2 4 2 0 2 9 4 3 0 2 3 0 5 0 10 9 1 9 0 1 2 0 0 21 6 4 0 15 1 4 16 16 2 14 27 0—377. Total after discount, 76. Average, 6.53-54.

The second game, Ubassy playing 600 to his antagonist's 400, took place on the 31st ult., and showed these figures:

Ubassy—3 3 0 1 3 15 0 0 17 13 2 0 23 1 1 1 0 38 6 0 7 5 3 1 7 0 0 29 0 4 1 2 1 10 1 2 2 22 0 0 9 3 8 14 0 12 1 0 35 25 1 6 0 0 7 17 48 2 0 1 32 4 1 26 31 6 2 1 4 0 8 16—600. Average, 8.4-7.

Bessunger—8 1 14 1 1 0 6 18 11 0 11 0 2 5 0 6 2 10 0 0 4 0 1 5 0 7 2 0 0 4 1 0 1 1 0 7 9 0 1 0 9 2 0 0 14 0 0 0 0 29 19 11 0 0 0 2 1 0 0 4 4 7 4 2 0 6 1 0 2 2 24—272. Average, 3.31-35.

The attendance on the last night was far less than on the prior occasions, and there was absolutely no betting, as though the Chicago community had suddenly conceived that they had had a surfeit of Bessunger and Ubassy. The final contest was remarkable in two respects, viz., for the unsteadiness of Ubassy's play, and for his run of 117, the largest on record. That he should make such a long run, together with 56, 47, 35, 33, 32, 28, 20, 17, 12 and 11 (a total of 398 in eleven innings), and yet score but 168 points more than Bessunger, whose best run was 29 only, is proof of Ubassy's unsteadiness. And further proof of it is the fact that in but twenty-two innings of the fifty-four of which the game consisted did Ubassy make a second counting stroke, while in but twenty-two did Bessunger fail to make a second counting stroke. The score is appended:

Ubassy—9 1 1 8 0 32 0 1 1 1 5 1 2 0 1 4 0 2 1 1 2 0 0 1 0 0 35 0 33 0 0 17 0 2 0 56 28 4 0 0 47 20 0 1 1 3 11 12 4 1 0 1 117 1. Total score, 468. Discount score, 205. Average, 9.1-27.

Bessunger—0 0 1 8 8 7 16 2 0 7 5 2 3 1 0 5 2 1 0 0 5 1 0 3 13 1 20 4 0 0 1 0 16 9 17 0 20 6 2 14 9 14 29 5 1 0 0 1 13 10 6 11 6 0 4. Total, 300. Average, 5.15-27.

They have now under discussion in Chicago the advisability of arranging another match, Ubassy to give Bessunger the lesser odds of 300 in 800. The prevailing impression there, as here, is that he ought to defeat Bessunger at that and at even greater odds.

Death of William H. Griffith.—This gentleman, who as a billiard-table manufacturer was outranked in seniority by scarcely anyone in the States, breathed his last on Friday night, the 6th inst., at the Maltby House, in this city, where he was temporarily stopping, having just returned from Florida. His death was not unexpected, as for more than a year prior to it he had been suffering from a suddenly developed pulmonary affection that in one of his overtaxed constitution was certain to end fatally. About eight months ago he repaired to Florida, that haven of hopeful consumptives, and there his malady was assuaged by the mild climate, but in no sense cured. The geniality of "Uncle Griff," as he loved to be called, rendered him one of the most companionable of men; and it may be said that, rather than to the intrinsic merits of his wares, the bulk of his sales as a manufacturer of billiard tables were a tribute to his personal popularity, while the remainder were due to his rare enterprise. As a mechanic he had a characteristic that stood him better than the others, in that he was a continual seeker after novelty. But only a few of his novelties, which he at least regarded as improvements, possess practical value; and of the several patents that he took out in the course of a quarter of a century, it is extremely doubtful if more than one or two will live after him. His latest patent, issued a few months ago, is also entitled an "improvement in billiard tables," and is described as "hanging a bridge from the middle and braces from the ends of the table." He will be best remembered as the introducer, in the Eastern States, of the wire cushion, a California invention. Many years ago he was in partnership with Levi Decker, now associated with Dudley Kavanagh. He was a native of Morris County, N. J.—born, we believe, in Dover—but for many years past had been a resident of Brooklyn, L. I., whence he will be buried to-day (Tuesday, June 10). A Mason, he belonged to Sylvan Grove Lodge No. 275. He was also a member of the Oceanus Club of Brooklyn. He was in his fifty-second year, and leaves a wife, who throughout his illness was constant in her ministrations. The business will doubtless be continued under the superintendence of the widow's brother, who has for many years been identified with it.

Actors at the Balls.—In Chicago, June 5, J. W. Blaisdell of Hooley's Theatre and E. D. Gooding of Josh Hart's Theatre Comique company played five strings of 34 points each, four-ball game, for $25 a side. Blaisdell won by three points. Joseph Ver Meulen was referee.

THE TURF.

JEROME PARK SPRING MEETING.

FIRST DAY, SATURDAY, JUNE 7.

Mate Wins the Fordham Handicap, Springbok the Belmont Stakes, Sunrise the Three-mile Dash, and Victor the Steeple Chase.

The Spring Meeting of the American Jockey Club commenced at Jerome Park on Saturday, the 7th inst. The weather was delightful, the attendance numerous, fashionable and otherwise, and the fields of starting horses large. The track, however, was heavy, in consequence of the heavy rain that had fallen the day before, and it is probable that some of the running of the opening day may be reversed on a good course. The victory of Mr. Sanford's colors in the first race, the Fordham Stakes, in which he ran first and second with Mate and Preakness, was a popular one, as was also that of Mr. McDaniels' Confederacy in the great race of the day and meeting, the Belmont Stakes, with Springbok, who now landed for his new owners this rich stake, worth over $6,000, for the third time in successive years; the Confederacy having won it in 1871 with Harry Bassett, and in 1872 with Joe Daniels. The parties comprising what is termed "The McDaniels Confederacy" are the veteran Colonel himself, who trains the horses owned by it; Messrs. Daniels and Hubbard (two wholesale straw-goods manufacturers in Broadway, this city) and Col. Gaige of Chicago, who last year purchased the interest of Messrs. Bassett and Harding. The members of the Confederacy are spirited bettors, and by the victory of Springbok they won an immense stake, as they backed him bravely not only in the pools, but in private bets also, on his beating several other named horses in the race. The race in the three-quarter-mile dash was one of the best ever seen, as a sheet would have covered the first four horses at the finish. The steeple-chase afforded a striking illustration of the "glorious uncertainty" of the turf, for Victor, the winner, was so little thought of that in a field of only three runners he only brought $30 in a pool of $730. Lochiel, the favorite, fell at the outer jump, when looking very formidable; Duffy bolted out of the course, and lost so much ground that he could never quite overtake Victor, who after making a blunder in the course won the race by a neck only. A better day's racing has never been witnessed at Jerome Park.

THE FORDHAM STAKES

was the first race, and was a sweepstakes, mile and a quarter. The numbr of starters out of the 38 entries was nine. These were Gray Planet, Buckden, Business, Hattie O'Neil, Preakness, Mute, Ortolan, Boss Tweed and Vim. Ortolan, who won this race last year, carrying 4 pounds more than he was now handicapped, was made the favorite in the pools, which sold as follows:

THE BETTING.

Ortolan	$50	$100	$120	$300	$350
Sanford's entries	26	70	80	210	240
Gray Planet	16	30	40	95	100
Buckden	26	40	40	55	100
Business	14	40	65	100	155
The Field	10	20	45	70	115

The start from the three-quarter pole was effected without delay, and was an excellent one. Directly the flag fell, Gray Planet rushed to the front, attended by Ortolan and Buckden, the latter taking the lead at the furlong pole, but as the horses went under the string Gray Planet, who was ridden by Mr. Belmont's newly imported English jockey, Evans, showed a neck in front of Buckden, who was half a length before Ortolan; the rest well up together. At the quarter-pole Gray Planet was still leading, with Ortolan, Business, and Sanford's pair lapped on him. Going around the Club-house bluff Ortolan deprived Gray Planet of the lead, Mate and Preakness being third and fourth. When they came in view again a change had taken place, for Sanford's pair were seen leading the field three lengths; Gray Planet, Buckden and Business the next three horses, and Ortolan far behind, having, it was reported, been cut down by Gray Planet as they passed the half-mile pole. The race was now virtually decided, for Mr. Sanford's pair turned into the homestretch with such a commanding lead that he could easily have won with either of them. As it was, Mate galloped home an easy winner, six lengths ahead of Preakness; with Business third, Gray Planet and Boss Tweed fourth and fifth; Buckden and Vim the next two, and Ortolan last. Time, 2:16. Value of stakes, $1,390. Summary:

Jerome Park, N. Y.—Spring Meeting of the American Jockey Club.—First day, June 7, 1873.—First Race.—The sixth renewal of the Fordham Handicap Sweepstakes of $50 each, half forfeit, only $10 if declared out on or before the 20th of May, with $500 added by the club; the second horse to receive $200 out of the stakes; winners, after publication of weights, of $1,000 to carry five pounds, of $2,000 seven pounds extra; closed with thirty-eight entries. Nineteen declared out and paid $10 each. Value of stakes, $1,390. Dash of a mile and a quarter.

THE BELMONT STAKES.

"The Jerome Park Derby" followed, and was a sweepstakes for three-year-olds. The distance was one mile and five furlongs, and out of the seventy-five nominations (three of which were void by the death of Mr. J. S. Watson) the following ten horses came to the post. Count D'Orsay, the imported Breadalbane colt out of Ellermire, Strachino (imported), Reviler, Waverley, Fellowcraft, Stonehenge, Galway, Springbok and Long Branch. Some surprise was expressed at the non-appearance of Silk Stocking, who had been persistently put about as the best of Mr. Belmont's stable; but the truth is that in a trial at home the week before, Count D'Orsay had proved the better horse at the distance, and the latter was consequently selected to represent the Babylon stable along with the imported Breadalbane colt. Wildidle, the pride of Mr. M. A. Littel's stable, had gone amiss, having thrown out a thoroughpin, and was struck out of the race on the 24th ult., and all bets made on him after that date are void. This was a great disappointment to the stable, as Wildidle had been tried and found to be a wonderfully good colt; as it was, Fellowcraft was selected to carry the black-and-tan colors of Mr. Littell in preference to Wizard. A finer lot of three-year-olds were never seen than the ten that Mr. B. G. Bruce the starter took in charge; seven of them being homebred and three imported, the latter the stock of Blair Athol, Parmesan and Breadalbane. The pool-betting was very heavy, the friends of each stable backing their respective choice pluckily. A good deal of money was also bet on the homebred colts against the imported at the odds of $100 to $75 on the former. We give the average of the pools sold by Dr. Underwood:

Belmont's	$275	$100	$675	$825	$255
McDaniel's	165	100	675	745	210
Hunter & Travers'	95	105	400	565	150
Clark & Grinstead's	85	100	415	405	105
Morris'	95	65	250	300	100
Wither's (Field)	65
Littell's (Field)	135	85	135	150	60
Bruce's (Field)	30

After parading in front of the grand stand, the starters proceeded to the foot of the club-house hill, where Mr. Bruce stood awaiting to dispatch them on their journey. After one false start, the flag fell to an even send-off, all the horses being close together; Strachino immediately rushing to the front, closely attended by Fellowcraft and Springbok; the others well up. As they disappeared from view behind the hill, Fellowcraft bore Mr. Littell's colors in advance, and he was still leading as they came in view; Strachino and Springbok second and third and Mr. Belmont's pair next them. On the lower stretch the rear horses drew closer to the leaders, and as they swept around the turn into the homestretch Stonehenge took the lead, and showed the way past the stand on the inside rails half a length before Fellowcraft, who, with the Breadalbane colt, Springbok and Count Dorsay, was in the centre of the track, all close together; Waverley being sixth, Reviler seventh, and Strachino next. They ran without any material change through the next quarter, but as they skirted the club-house bluff, some important changes ensued, for at this point Jimmy Roe let out Shylock, who had been pulling hard, and he instantly shot past his horses to the front; Waverley also improving his position by taking second place, and going so strong as to inspire his friends with renewed confidence. Here Stonehenge and the Breadalbane colt hung out signals of distress, and to the dismay of their backers fell back hopelessly beaten, the heavy going not suiting their action. At the next moment Waverley retired, and Count D'Orsay, who had been running well within himself, moved up and became second. As they came into view after rounding the hill, Springbok was leading two lengths, and a thousand voices proclaimed "McDaniels wins!" Turning into the last quarter, Roe took Springbok wide to the outside, where the ground was firm and the going good; half way up Count D'Orsay came with a lightning rush next the rails, and for a moment looked dangerous; but Roe sat still on his horse until within ten lengths of the score, when he loosed his pull on the reins, and Springbok shot out and won the race cleverly by a length; Count Dorsey second, six lengths before Strachino; Waverly fourth, Reviler and Fellowcraft the next two, the Breadalbane Colt seventh and Stonehenge last. Time, 3:01¼. The victory of the McDaniels Confederacy was received with immense cheering. Springbok was bred by A. J. Alexander at Woodburn Stud Farm, Kentucky, in 1870, and sold, when a yearling, at public sale to M. D. Swigert for $430. That gentleman brought him East, and last Spring at Jerome Park won a two-year-old purse of $500 with him, beating Katie Pease, Minnie W., Luna, and Northland with signal ease. The experienced eye of Col. McDaniels detected the latent racing merits of the colt, and he at once purchased him for $2,000. He ran him in the Saratoga stakes, won by Catesby, but he was not up to the mark at the time. At the Jerome Park Fall Meeting, the Colonel had him thoroughly fit, and having bred him very highly, told his colleagues that he could win the Champagne Stakes to a certainty, but that it was better policy not to start and expose his abilities in that race, but reserve him for the rich Belmont Stakes the following season. His advice was adopted, and the result is the Confederacy have not only won the rich stake, but have landed some thousands in bets. He is by imported Australian out of Hester by Lexington, grandam Heads I Say, by Glencoe. He is a rich chestnut, 15½ hands in height, has a clean-cut, resolute head, set on a handsome neck running into well inclined shoulders, with good back and loins, immense hips and stifles, and with legs well up under him. He has a white star in forehead, light blaze on face, and one fore and two white feet above the pasterns. He is engaged in the Jersey Derby at Long Branch, and the Travers and Kenner Stakes at Saratoga, in all of which he will have to meet the redoubtable Kentucky crack, Tom Bowling. The piece of plate given by Mr. Belmont is a magnificent work of art, made by Messrs. Hancock of London, after designs by the celebrated Monte. The design represents a mounted Indian in the act of thrusting a spear into a buffalo, executed in solid silver; the ground being worked out in bronze on a pedestal of black and red marble, on the front panel of which is a silver plate inscribed, "Belmont Stakes, 1873. Presented by August Belmont, President of the American Jockey Club."

Second Race.—The seventh renewal of the Belmont Stakes for three-year-olds; $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,000 added by the club; Mr. August Belmont, president of the American Jockey Club, adding a piece of plate worth $1,000, with the condition that if one of his own stable wins the race it will be given to the Ladies' Stakes, to be run on the second day of the meeting; the second horse to receive $300 out of the stakes; closed with seventy-five nominations, of which three were rendered void by the death of their nominator. Value of the stake, $5,600. A dash of a mile and five furlongs.

THE THIRD RACE.

was a dash of three-quarters of a mile, and eleven out of the thirteen entries started, viz., Sunrise, Bingaman, Mildew, Quits, Fadladeen, The Nurse, Manitoba, Chickabiddy, Brennus, Mascus, and the Leamington-Wombat filly of Col. McDaniels. Pools sold as follows:

Quits	$130	$310	$100	$560	$100
Fadladeen	60	120	120	130	Field, $165
McDaniels	85	160	90	325
Sanford	40	100	100	100
The Nurse	40	40	20	60
Field	105	95	100	180

A capital start was had, Sunrise leading around the hill, with Mildew next, Quits and Fadladeen close up. A desperate race up the homestretch resulted in a dead heat between Sunrise and Mildew, with Fadladeen a neck behind them. The rider of Sunrise claimed a foul against Mildew's rider, which the judges allowed, and gave the race to Sunrise, disqualifying both Mildew and Bingaman, Mr. Sanford's entries.

Same Day.—Third Race.—Purse $400; for all ages; five per cent. entrance to go to the second horse; maidens, if 3 years old, allowed 3lb; if 4 years, 7lb; if 5 years or upward, 12lb; a dash of three-quarters of a mile.

THE STEEPLE CHASE,

for a purse of $700, had only three runners—Lochiel, Duffy and Victor. Lochiel sold for $400, Duffy $300, Victor $30. Lochiel fell at the first water-jump and threw his rider heavily; Duffy bolted out of the course, allowing the outsider, Victor, to gain a great lead, which he could never thoroughly overcome, but was beaten after a most exciting finish by a neck.

Same Day.—Steeple-chase—Purse $700, of which $200 goes to the second horse; welter weights; entrance free, about two and a half miles.

BOIARD WINS THE PRIZE OF PARIS.

At Longchamps, France, the great race on the turf calendar of the French Republic came off on Sunday, June 8, in presence of a large assemblage, which included many notables, chief among whom were President McMahon and M. Buffet. There was a large delegation from England, who backed Doncaster, the Derby winner, heavily, he being the favorite in the betting. The winner of the French Derby, Boiard, however, proved more than a match for his distinguished rival from across the Channel, going to the front at the turn, and coming home three lengths ahead, with Flageolet second, the favorite securing third place only. Summary:

Grand Prix de Paris of 100,000 francs in specie, half by the City of Paris and half by the great railway companies of France, for entire colts and fillies (foaled in 1870) of all countries, added to a sweepstake of 1,000 francs each; 600 forfeit, and 500 only if declared out by midnight on the Wednesday preceding the race, and 100 only if declared out by midnight of the 1st of May preceding the race. The second to receive 10,000 francs and the third 5,000 francs out of the stakes. Closed with 144 subscribers. A dash of a mile and seven furlongs.

Betting.—Even on Doncaster, 2 to 1 against Boiard, 20 to 1 against Flageolet. Won easily by three lengths.

ELMO DEFEATS JEROME.

About twenty-five hundred spectators were in attendance at the Oakland Trotting Park, across the bay from San Francisco, Cal., on the 31st ult., when the long-expected race between O. A. Hickok's chestnut stallion Elmo and D. Dennison's bay gelding Jerome took place. The betting just before the start was at odds of 2 to 1 on the Eastern horse (Elmo), but after he had won the first heat handily, with over three lengths to spare, the quotations rose to $300 to $40 upon him. He won the second heat with the greatest ease, crossing the score at almost a walk. Summary:

Oakland (Cal.) Trotting—Park, May 31, 1873.—Purse and stake $12.50; two miles and repeat, in harness.

The Fleetwood Park Entries.—The purses to be trotted for at the Fleetwood Park Spring Meeting, which takes place on June 18, 20, 23 and 24, closed on Monday evening, the 2d inst. All of them filled well; that for 2:50 having fifteen entries; nine in the 2:29; eight in the 2:34; fifteen in the 2:42; four in the 2:23, and four in the 2:21. In the last named the entries are Gazelle, Judge Fullerton, W. H. Allen and Huntress. The Fleetwood Park entries compare favorably with those in the purses at the Prospect Park Course Meeting, only three of which filled.

H. Ogden Wilder has leased the Institution race-track, Easton, Pa., and put it in admirable condition. The Easton Driving Park Association will hold their Spring Meeting June 18, 19 and 20. The sum of $1,000 is offered in premiums, and the entries close June 16 at 9 o'clock P. M. They can be made to Geo. M. Davis, secretary.

John M. Duncan, a prominent California turf-man and president of the Bay District Agricultural Association, died in San Francisco May 31, after a brief illness. He was but forty-one years of age. During the last few years of his life he did much to elevate the sport of horse-racing on the Pacific coast, and his death is deeply regretted in turf circles there.

A new half-mile track has been laid off on the former Buckeye Course, near Cincinnati. It was inaugurated on the 4th by a trot, mile heats, between Sheriff Ziegler's ch colt Black Maria and Fred Assel's bl colt, the former taking two straight heats, in 3:08½; 3:10½.

TRIGGER.

The Cleveland (O.) Sportsmen's Club held their first meeting in the field June 6. The sport began with a four-handed match for the birds, shooting at three singles each. Wheal's side won; score, 7 to 5. Next came a sweepstakes, for four prizes, ten singles each, 21 yards rise, fourteen entries. J. J. Schwind killed nine, taking the first prize; Fred. Wheal killed seven and captured the second; while the third was won by Kelso and the fourth by Goshorn, after shooting off ties. A double-bird sweepstakes, four prizes, followed, nine entries. Farrar and Gardner, who killed six each, divided the first prize; Cowan won the second, Capt. Pinnington the third, and the fourth was divided by Schwind and Rockafellar.

The members of the Onondaga Sportsmen's Club had a field day at Syracuse, N. Y., June 4. The chief event was the contest for the club medal between Chas. Lodder and Chas. Mowesy, 15 single birds each. Lodder won, killing 12 to his opponent's 6. Three sweepstakes shoots at ten singles each followed, F. Gale and J. Cheney making clean scores.

A cocking main took place at Belleville, Ont., June 3, between George J. Thomas of Belleville and Fred. Gokey of Montreal. Five battles were fought for $25 a side each, light fowls being heeled with 1¼ inch spurs, and heavy birds with 1¾ inch spurs. Thomas won four fights, the main occupying but thirty-four minutes, twenty of which were consumed in the first battle.

The New York Caledonia Club will hold their annual picnic at Dudley's Grove, on the Hudson, Wednesday, June 11. The steamer General Sedgwick and the barges Walter Sands and W. J. Haskett have been chartered for the occasion.

The annual games of the Scranton (Pa.) Caledonia Club will be held this year on July 4.

AQUATIC.

NEW YORK YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

The annual Spring regatta of the above-named club, which had been postponed on the 5th because of lack of sufficient wind to enable the participants to complete the distance within the stipulated time, came off on June 6. The course was from off the lower point of Staten Island to and around the South-west Spit buoy, thence to and around the lightship, and return. The start was a flying one, and fifteen minutes were allowed for the yachts to cross the line after the firing of the signal. Little public interest was felt in the affair, the only steamer which accompanied the vessels being the Charles Chamberlin, on board of which were the Regatta Committee, a few members of the club and representatives of the press. At 11.16 A. M. the starting gun was fired and the vessels were off, crossing the line as follows:

Schooners.	Actual Time.	Corrected Time.
Idler	11h 18m 07s	4h 1m 20s
Ariadne	11 18 22	3h 57m 43s
Ianthe	11 18 49	4 20 07
Foam	11 18 54	4 20 07
Eva	11 19 05	4 12 53
Peerless	11 19 27	4 37 37
Palmer	11 19 27	4 37 37
Madeleine	11 20 29	4 28 56
Qui Vive	11 52 22	4 46 33
Sloops.
Gracie	11 24 11	4 35 51
Foam	11 34 31	4 31 13
Vixen	11 48 36	4 36 55

The wind was light from the southwest, and it was feared that the result would be as unsatisfactory as on the day previous. The Idler held the lead until within ten minutes' run of the Spit buoy, when the Vixen and Eva challenged, and after a close race passed her, the turn being made in the following order and time:

Vixen	12h 35m 05s	Vision	12h 42m 08s
Eva	12 35 33	Ianthe	12 42 34
Idler	12 37 39	Ariadne	12 47 43
Foam	12 38 12	Peerless	12 48 05
Madeleine	12 39 18	Resolute	12 50 48
Palmer	12 40 38	Madgie	12 55 58
Gracie	12 41 30	Qui Vive	12 56 10

Soon after rounding and heading for the lightship the Idler regained the advantage lost. The wind now freshened and the Madeleine began to near the front row, while the Palmer rapidly overhauled and passed the Idler, her style of going being greatly admired, and causing many to consider the first prize hers already. Unfortunately, however, as they neared the lightship her maintopsail sprit gave way, a mishap which occasioned considerable delay and doubtless lost her the race, though she rounded in advance, as shown by the following table:

Palmer	1h 44m 54s	Resolute	1h 56m 09s
Idler	1 46 22	Vision	1 56 25
Madeleine	1 47 11	Gracie	1 59 25
Eva	1 48 36	Ianthe	1 59 50
Foam	1 50 59	Madgie	Time not taken.
Vixen	1 50 54

The working topsail was now set on the Palmer, but it failed to retain the lead for her, the Idler soon giving her the go-by and the Madeleine following suit. The Eva's foretopsail halyards now gave way, thus destroying all her chances of securing a prize at a time when she was sailing finely. The Spit buoy was turned thus:

Idler	2h 32m 17s	Foam	2h 38m 30s
Madeleine	2 32 29	Resolute	2 45 48
Palmer	2 34 57

It being necessary for the steamer to return immediately to the home buoy, the time of the other vessels was not taken. Just after pointing homeward the Madeleine collared and passed the Idler, maintaining her lead to the finish and increasing it considerably. A severe squall struck the vessels within a short distance of the close, which threw the Madgie on her beam ends, and it was feared that she would go down, but luckily she gallantly answered her helm and stood up again. The appended table shows the order of arrival and time of the race:

Schooners.	Actual Time.	Corrected Time.
Madeleine	4h 1m 20s	3h 57m 43s
Idler	4 11 4	4 6 12
Foam	4 11 44	4 11 16
Peerless	4 20 07	4 20 07
Ianthe	4 57 14	4 12 53
Madgie	4 37 37	4 37 37
Palmer	4 54 37	4 28 56
Eva	5 5 22	4 46 33
Sloops.
Gracie	4 35 51	4 35 51
Foam	4 34 31	4 31 13
Vixen	4 48 36	4 36 55

The Madeleine won the schooner prize without allowance, the Idler the schooner prize with time allowance, the Vision the sloop prize without allowance, and the Gracie the sloop prize with allowance.

BROWN CHALLENGES COULTER.—In a recent issue of The Halifax (N. S.) Chronicle we find the following: "George Brown's challenge to the world for a race in Halifax harbor not having found any acceptance, and American sporting papers having intimated that if he would row abroad a match could be made, he forwarded a few days ago a challenge to Henry Coulter, who, though beaten once by Brown, claims to be the 'Champion of America,' offering to row him a race at Springfield, Mass. If Coulter's present engagement with Scharff prevents the acceptance of this challenge at once, Brown will row the winner of the Coulter-Scharf match. Pending the receipt of these challenges, George will take up his residence somewhere on the shores of Bedford Basin and go into practice." From this it would appear that the Halifaxonian mercantile gentleman who has been chosen final stake-holder, Commodore Benj. F. Brady received the stakes at this office June 9.

OARSMEN REPRESENTING THE DIFFERENT COLLEGES which are to take part in the grand regatta on the Connecticut River, at Springfield, Mass., July 17, are now diligently training under the mentorship of accomplished professionals and amateur knights of the blade. As yet, however, the exact composition of the several crews cannot be given, as the work of selection has not been completed. We will doubtless be able to definitely announce their names in our succeeding issue.

A FOUR-OARED RACE between the schools Juniata and Sheridan came off at Glenwood, above Pittsburgh, Pa., June 7. The course was three miles in length and the Juniatas won, though they would not have had so easy a victory had not one of the outriggers of the Sheridan broken on the homestretch. They pulled in heavy pine boats, and the time given was 22:40.

A YACHT RACE, for prizes of a silver ice-pitcher, cream pitcher and goblet, one for each class, came off at Baltimore, Md., June 2. For the first-class prize there were five entries, the Nat. C. Robinson winning; second class, four entries, the Mary Jane winning; third-class, four entries, the Emma Nickie winning. The judges were Messrs. Oscar Hillegust, James Murdock and George McKee.

THE MCKEE RANGE CLUB of Pittsburgh, Pa., will send the following four-oared crew to the Toronto, Ont., regatta, which comes off on June 28: Cooney Minehart (bow), Henry Best, Nick Denmarsh, Roney Miller (stroke). Denmarsh will contend against Berry in the single-scull race. They will afterwards proceed to Buffalo, N. Y., and row in the regatta at that place July 4.

THE HARVARD CLASS RACES came off on Charles River, Boston, Mass., June 3. In the first race, which was between the second crews of the Junior Sophomores and Freshmen, two miles, was won by the former, in 14:38s. The second, between the first crews of the same classes, three miles, resulted in a victory for the Juniors, their time being 21:07.

THE THREE-MILE RACE, in four-oared shells, between the Chesapeake Club of Norfolk, Va., and the Anacostans of Washington, D. C., came off on the Potomac River, at the latter city, on Wednesday, June 4, and resulted in the triumph of the crew from "Old Virginny." Time, 21m. 5s. A large assemblage witnessed the struggle.

BILLY SCHARFF, who is now matched with Coulter, has had a new cedar shell built by Espy of East Birmingham, Pa. Its dimensions are as follows: Length, 29ft. 6in.; width, 11in.; depth, 5in.; weight, 25lb. Jimmy Hamill, ex-champion, has been engaged to train Scharff.

THE ANNUAL SINGLE-SCULL RACE for the championship of the Union Boat Club of Boston, Mass., was to have taken place on the Charles River June 4, but W. F. Brownell failed to put in an appearance, and H. A. Stevens (who won last year) pulled over the course alone, retaining the medal.

A MILE RACE, with one turn, came off at Boston, Mass., June 6, between M. J. Corbett, Jas. Butler and Wm. Brown, for a gold medal. It was won by Corbett, Butler breaking a thole-pin shortly after starting—an accident which deprived the race of interest.

OLIVER JOHNSON, the crack sculler of the Neptune Rowing Association of New Brighton, S. I., has challenged Ed. Smith of the Argonautas of Bergen Point, N. J., to row another three-miler, and the latter has accepted, naming July 26 as the date of rowing.

THE ANNUAL REGATTA of the Harlem Association has been definitely fixed for July 2.

FOR THE Fourth of July regatta at Buffalo, N. Y., the celebration committee have set apart the sum of one thousand dollars. The executive committee of the Buffalo Central Rowing Association will, it is expected, have charge of all arrangements.

THE BROOKLINE (MASS.) ROWING CLUB is now officered as follows: President, Henry M. Martin; secretary, Frank Dupee; directors, S. G. Train, E. P. Kennard and E. P. Train; regatta committee, Frank Dupee, E. P. Kennard and S. G. Train.

THE ATLANTIC YACHT CLUB REGATTA is to be sailed over the regular course in the bay to-day (Tuesday). The entries are numerous, and include the Idler, Resolute, Foam, Peerless, Triton, Agnes, Mystic, Eddie, Vision, Vixen, Daphne, Orion, etc.

EBEN LOKEE of the Atalanta Boat Club has been matched with David Roche of the Nautilus to row two miles, for a prize valued at $100; the race to take place on the Harlem River July 11.

JAMES WILSON, formerly of the Beaverwyck Club of Albany, N. Y., has been elected a member of the Grammercy Club of Harlem, and will form one of the four-cared crew of said club in the July regatta.

CORNELIUS WRIGHT of the Xanthe Club and John A. Snyder of the Beck have been matched to row three miles, for $300, on the lower Monongahela course, Pittsburgh, Pa., July 26.

THE COLUMBIA BOAT CLUB of Allegheny, Pa., have decided to take part in both the four-cared and single-scull races at the Toronto, Ont., regatta, and will doubtless enter for the Buffalo regatta, also.

A FOUR-OARED SHELL, built of Spanish cedar, by Fred Espy, has been presented to the Niagara Club of Buffalo, N. Y., by the McKee Club of Pittsburgh, as a mark of esteem.

MESSRS. MILLS of Yale, and Dutton of Cornell University, have entered for the single-scull race at Springfield, Mass.

TWELVE HUNDRED DOLLARS have been appropriated by the Boston (Mass.) Common Council for the usual Fourth of July regatta on the Charles River.

A RACE between the Potomac Club of Washington, D. C., and the Argonautas of Bergen Point, N. J., will probably be arranged.

CRICKET.

ST. GEORGE vs. MANHATTAN.

The first match of the season at Hoboken took place on the St. George cricket grounds on June 4 between representative elevens of the St. George and Manhattan Clubs, barring professionals, the latter club not having any professional player. The weather proved auspicious for the afternoon's play, the rain of the previous day having fallen opportunely for laying the dust, and everything was pleasant in consequence. Smith of the St. George had an excellent wicket prepared at an early hour, but as usual no one was on hand at the appointed time, and play was not called until noon. It is useless in these second-class matches to attempt to commence play before the afternoon. In June and July there are four hours of time for a one-inning game after 3 P. M., and if it is necessary to play a full game, better devote two afternoons to it after business hours than occupy the valuable morning time.

Play was called near 1 P. M. with the St. George men at the bat, Cashman opening the game with some demoralizing punishment of the bowling, 36 runs being scored before they were parted, Jones contributing a well-obtained 25 in his usual style, and Cashman batting safely for 16. Moeran was the next to make a stand, and he handled the willow in lively style for 35 runs, a "sixer" to leg and drives for 4 and 3 being noteworthy. Sleigh and Bowman were his partners, both scoring double figures neatly. This ended the run-getting, as none of the others scored average figures, and but nine men went to the bat. The eleven were but 8, the fielding being very good. Ronaldson took nearly all the wickets, he bowling well on the stumps, but too favorable a length for the batting. The total score was 113, a pretty good two hours' work for nine men.

After lunch the Manhattans went in to try and pull off the heavy score, Hosford and Harry Tucker leading off. Despite a good defense and excellent play by Hosford, what with the effective bowling and the good support given it in the field, the Manhattan men found it up-hill work, and when their third wicket had fallen for 12 only, things looked unpromisingly for success. They managed, however, to secure a sufficient number of runs to escape following their inning, their tenth wicket falling for 62, of which Hosford's 26, Kersley's 24 and Keller's 8 were the principal contributions, Hosford being in for nearly two hours. Moeran and Jones divided the bowling between them, the former taking the majority of wickets. The game was fully enjoyed throughout, the weather in the afternoon turning out charmingly for cricket. The following is the score:

On Wednesday and Thursday the St. George and Staten Island Clubs will play their return match at Hoboken, and they have wisely arranged to play but one inning each day, beginning at 3 P. M.

The Manhattan Club have challenged the journalists of the Prospect Park Club of Brooklyn to play them a holiday game at the park on the Fourth of July, and though the latter have no organized team as yet they will probably present the best eleven novices they can raise, only to be badly whipped, however. This will not trouble them, as they play only for recreation and exercise, not to win matches.

UNION vs. NEW HAVEN.

On June 3 a cricket match was contested at Hamilton Park, New Haven, Conn., between the New Haven Club and the Unions of South Meriden. It resulted in favor of the latter with three wickets to go down. Bulluss and Fitzgerald batted well for the winning side, as did Walters and Cruise for New Haven, while the bowling was quite up to the average, that of Whiteley being particularly effective. THE PROSPECT PARK CLUB.—A very enjoyable time was had by this journalistic cricket club on June 7 at Prospect Park, not only on the field during the afternoon, but in the club-house in the evening; for after the regular Saturday afternoon's practice game about thirty members sat down to an elegant cold collation at the "Shelter House," by invitation of President John G. Culyer, where speeches, toasts and sociality reigned until 10 P. M. This club is now permanently established, and will play their first match game with the Manhattan Club at Prospect Park on the Fourth of July. Their leading players include Messrs. Woodhams, Longmore, McLean, Dexter, North, Randall, Griffiths, Peters, Terry, Dr. Drayton, Chadwick, Kullen, etc., the latter being the only cricket expert of the crowd.

EAGLE vs. STAR.—A match was played at Watertown, Mass., May 30, between the Eagle Cricket Club of Chelsea and the Stars of Newton. The first-named won by 24 runs, the score being 111 to 87. The members of the Eagle Club recently elected the following officers: President, John Goddard: vice-president, H. Eicke; treasurer, Joseph Smith; secretary, Thos. E. Mulvy; directors, John Nelson, Alfred Smith and Fred Farrand. Harry Carpenter is field captain.

A CRICKET MATCH was played at South Meriden, Conn., June 7, between the Union Club of that town and an eleven chosen from the employees of the Meriden Britannia Company. The Unions won by one inning and thirty-four runs, scoring 67, while their opponents made but 15 in the first and 18 in the second inning.

ST. GEORGE vs. TORONTO.—The St. George Club members state that they have not heard from the Toronto Club in regard to the match announced to be played at Hoboken; and consequently there will be no game until they do. On Wednesday the St. George eleven play the Staten Island Club at Hoboken.

PEDESTRIANISM.

NEW YORK ATHLETIC CLUB.—Two championship races came off on the grounds of this thriving organization at Harlem, N. Y., June 7. The first was 100 yards, the contestants being H. E. Buermyeyer, the holder of the medal, and M. E. Burris. The latter got away with a slight lead, he never headed, though at one time his antagonist was upon even terms—and finally won a most exciting race by a trifle over a foot. Time, 10 1-5sec. Referee, F. Kenney. Judges, J. H. Stead and Meakin. The second event was a three-mile walking match, for the club medal, Brown and McCready contending. The latter led for about three hundred yards, but Brown then wrested the lead from him, and held it to the close, winning most creditably. Time, 27min. 55sec. Referee, F. Kenney. Judges, Messrs. Stead and Coane.

ED. MOULTON the Gopher Boy, who is at present located at Cleveland, O., desires to know whether Joe Stratton will make a match with him to run one hundred and forty yards for $250 or $500 a side. If Joseph is willing to do so, let him signify the same through THE CLIPPER, stating also the date upon which he wishes to run.

ATHLETIC vs. MUTUAL.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The Athletics, by the finest display of batting witnessed for many a season, decisively defeated the Mutuals on the grounds at Twenty-fifth and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, Monday afternoon, June 9. About five hundred spectators were present—a much smaller number than had been expected, especially as the weather was all that could be wished for. Both nines fielded very well, but the Mutuals batted weakly, making only two clean hits in the first seven innings. Martin pitched and Hatfield played third base the last five innings. The Mutual's only earned run was obtained in the last inning. The score was as follows:

PHILADELPHIA vs. ATLANTIC.

The match played in Brooklyn between these clubs on June 9 would have resulted in a victory for the Atlantics but for some important fielding errors, the Brooklyn nine outbatting the White Stockings by 5 to 0 of earned runs, and 13 to 7 in first-base hits; but the figures indicating first base given eight times by errors to but once by the Philadelphians, and the other fact of thirteen errors to six in favor of the better fielding by the Whites, shows how the battle was lost. The umpire observed the rules strictly in calling balls and strikes. We give the score:

Of the play on the occasion Pearce was noteworthy, as also was that of Ferguson, Boyd leading at the bat. On the other side Meyerle did some good fielding, and so did Fulmer, Bechtel getting the most fly balls. Devlin led at the bat.

To-day the Bostons play the Mutuals in Brooklyn.

MUTUAL vs. PHILADELPHIA.

After the display made by the Mutual nine in their twelve-innings contest with the Bostons last week, their friends very naturally expected that the era of defeats would be previously marked their career this Spring had passed, and that now they were going in to recover their lost ground. With this anticipation about 2,000 people visited the Union grounds on Saturday, June 7, to witness the return match of the series between the Philadelphia nine and the Mutuals. A more thoroughly disappointed crowd, however, never left the field than the assemblage who witnessed this contest, for it turned out to be naught but a regular champion muffin match, no less than forty fielding errors marking the display, of which twenty-six were made by the New Yorkers, every man except Martin taking a hand in. In dropped fly balls it was the model game of the season, seven catches being missed by the Mutuals, and three or four by the Philadelphians. The contest afforded another proof of the fact that it is not batting that wins, for the Mutuals earned four runs to three, and scored seventeen first-base hits to fourteen. But this advantage was offset by their allowing their opponents to get to first base twelve times by errors, to but five by the White Stockings, and in being assisted by a total of 26 errors to 14.

The game opened in favor of the Mutuals, who earned one run to their opponents' none; but a dropped fly by Eggler gave a run..... The next three innings the White Stockings failed to hit Mathews' pitching for a single earned base, and despite several errors they were easily whitewashed, Hicks playing well in his position. On the other side, however, the Mutuals in their third inning scored four runs on as many base hits, two being earned, a dropped fly ball by Treacy from a hot liner from Hicks' bat giving two runs in..... In the 5th inning the Whites earned their first run, Wood—after two men were out—hitting safe, and Malone, by an old-time hit to the out-field, earned his third base and run home through poor fielding; Meyerle also getting a base hit, two runs being scored and earned..... In the sixth inning Bechtel led off with an easy ball to Eggler, who dropped it. The next two men were then put out. Mack had a life given him by Bellan's fearful throw, and as Zettlein hit for two bases, two unearned runs were scored. In the interim the Mutuals had been easily put out twice for blunders, so the game at the close of the first part of the sixth inning stood a tie—5 to 5. The Mutuals, however, after their two great strikers had retired, hit Zettlin for three first bases; but had Wood laid a ball fair to him they would not have been blanked. As it was, they scored a single and closed the sixth inning with a lead of 6 to 5..... Now came the champion display of professional muffinism of the season on both sides, for not less than 9 runs were scored in the 7th inning, and but one run earned; but five base hits being made. Wood opened with an easy ball to Bellan, who sent it among the crowd back of Start's position; the next man was then fielded out by Start; Meyerle now gave Bellan a chance to throw him out, but away went the ball again over Start's head; next, Bechtel sent a nice high fly to Gedney, who dropped the ball; then Fulmer hit a high fly which Hicks let fall out of his hands, and after Treacy had been forced out at second, another man had a life given him by Start; finally, after five unearned runs had been scored, the third man was put out, ten men going to the bat in this splendid inning! The score now stood at 10 to 6 in favor of the Whites, and the crowd gave them the Fulmer. But now it was the other side's turn to try and excel in muffinism, and came near doing it. Hatfield opened with a ball to Meyerle and had a life given him; Start hit to Wood and he muffed; the next three went in for a rally, and by three base hits as many men got in, one run being earned. Malone then dropped a foul tip, and by Holdsworth's good hit another run was scored. In fact, the score at the close of the seventh stood at 10 to 10, and playing as the Philadelphians were, by any decent management the Mutuals would have won as it was. But as before, they failed at the bat just when good hits were wanted, and, giving their opponents runs by errors, finally lost the game by a score of 12 to 10. In the seventh inning Martin was sent in to pitch to relieve Matthews, and after five chances to put players out had been given off his pitching, they replaced Matthews.

Of the good play shown in the game Cuthbert's fine outfielding was the most noteworthy on the White Stocking side, Fulmer also fielding splendidly at short field. Indeed, he is playing in a far superior manner to what he did in New York last year. On the Mutual side Hicks caught splendidly, considering his disabled condition, Hatfield leading at the bat; Malone doing the best batting on the Philadelphia side. The umpire, we noticed, allowed no less than nine unfair balls to go by uncalled. Take it altogether, the contest was unworthy the reputation of either nine. The Whites ought to have been defeated by 5 to 3. The following is the score:

ATHLETIC vs. RESOLUTE.

The second championship game between the Athletics of Philadelphia and the Resolutes of Elizabeth was played on the former's ground at Twenty-fifth and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, on the 7th of June. The attendance was small. The weather was clear, with a stiff breeze blowing that interfered materially with the batting. Murnan made his reappearance with the Athletics, who played their usual fine fielding game and won easily by a score of 14 to 4, the Resolutes' fielding being poor, especially in the seventh inning. Sutton's magnificent batting and fielding were the most noticeable features of the game, a brilliant left-handed jumping catch by McGeary being much applauded. M. Campbell, who had his shoulder dislocated in the Resolute-Athletic match, played well at right-field, where he made four good catches. The following was the score:

GAME BETWEEN TYPOS.—Nines composed of type wrestlers employed in the offices of The Chronicle and The Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., confronted each other in a match at Union Park, Allegheny, June 7, in which the former team (having the valuable services of Harry Palmer and Barney Kennedy) came off with flying colors. Score, 53 to 38. Upon their return to Smoke town the elated victors proceeded to Arch's, on Smithfield street, and there celebrated their triumph after a fashion which showed them to be perfectly regardless of the expense.

THE BOSTON CLUB'S present engagements are as follows: On June 10 they play the Mutuals, on the Union ground, Brooklyn, E. D.; 11th, Atlantics, same place; 12th, Resolutes, same place; 12th, reception game at Boston, Mass.; 14th, Athletics, same place; 17th, Philadelphias, same place; 25th, Washington, same place.

THE TELEGRAPH led us into error in the account of the game played by the Baltimore and Washington clubs May 30, the correct score being 22 to 6.

PHILADELPHIA vs. BOSTON.

The Boston Club of Boston on the 6th inst., in Philadelphia, sustained the most signal defeat that they ever met with, at the hands of the Philadelphia Club. The day was clear, bright and beautiful, and the attendance large, between three and four thousand persons being present. The Philadelphia White Stockings, having won the first game of their championship series, were therefore the favorites in the betting at the odds of 100 to 75, and after the first three innings it was any odds that they would win, with no takers.

The White Stockings opened the contest auspiciously by scoring four runs, two earned, in the first inning, thanks to a series of lucky hits, a base on called balls, and a bad miss by O'Rourke; lack of activity of the part of White and O'Rourke causing chances offered by Cuthbert and Malone to escape, else a blank would have resulted. The Red Stockings were bl

"McSWATTAGAN'S PICNIC."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BY FRANK DUMONT.

McSwattagan had been working hard,
Climbing up ladders with the hod;
One bright day he said to his wife,
"I'll get a day off and have a picnic."

A dozen friends he did invite,
And refreshments piled he in a cart—
Big potatoes, whiskey by the quart,
And all the cake or drink did ask.

Some boys tied one to the cart behind,
Which she tied curled with the greatest care;
Makeup cloth on, looked pretty fair,
And perfumed his hair and breath—
Had polished up his beaver but
By rubbing on it hard and fat.
The ladies in their best did dress,
The picnic seemed a big success.

At length they reached the country air—
For dinner they had corned beef and cabbage:
His rosin and fiddle he couldn't find;
So McSwattagan had to hum a tune,
And it makes me scared, very much,
The bottles were emptied one by one,
When McSwagger's father spoilt the fun—
He said he'd been insulted there,
And for a rection did prepare.

The Pride had said he'd guard it green
A little while he might have been,
The Bully's head got very red,
And he hit Pat Flynn across the head.
Miss Doyle she lost her new red hair;
McSwattagan he began to swear;
McCarthy stepped upon his toes,
And crushed the bunions on his toes;
The fiddler was pulled out through his seat,
And they jammed his fiddle down his throat.

Bricks and stones began to fly—
One old lady got a broken eye;
Policemen then did come in force,
Quieted the row, and stopped the course.

Miss Doyle into the crowd she flew,
And tore McSwattagan's shirt in two.
The crowd fell fighting in a heap—
They couldn't walk, they couldn't creep;
Policeman did the picnic end,
And the picnic party home did tend.

NEXT DAY.

'Twas the finest day they'd ever seen—
A pleasant time it might have been.
The guests did say with one accord
That McSwattagan's picnic was a FRAUD.

THE FLYING FAIRY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BY FANNY HUNT.

Sitting at a window one foggy, cheerless morning, in Russell street, Covent Garden, about the end of December, with my darling baby on my lap, and not knowing what to do for its amusement, I began tapping upon the glass; but baby was cross, and would not be pacified. Then, to relief, I saw an Italian organ-boy coming. Seeing us at the window, he stopped; and, laughing at baby, he struck up a lively dance tune, to my delight and baby's intense enjoyment; baby clapped its wee hands, and I danced it up and down before the dirty-looking window, which was all I could afford with the greatest care; Madame Saqui could not look more graceful. My little boy-friend was rewarded with a penny, and he went. But we were not to have all the fun to ourselves. First one little ragged boy with open mouth and his hands in his pockets, and then another, came to listen to the merry music. At last quite a little party of dirty, ragged children gathered round, and very soon began a dance as well as baby. This quieted baby all of a sudden, for with large, wondering eyes it looked at the lively little folks, not knowing what to make of it all; and very amusing it was to watch these merry, half-clad children dancing in their wooden shoes, and the Italian's organ-boy seemed to catch the infection, for he joined in occasionally. By-and-bye a little, thinly-dressed girl joined the crowd; she did not immediately mix among the dancers, but stood with a queer little look-out-for-number sort of air about her, the other, evidently bent on an errand. As this is to be my little heroine, I must describe her more fully to the reader.

She was about nine years old, and simply lovely: bright golden hair flowing over her shoulders, and reaching below her waist in thick, natural curls; a small, pale, oval face, too thoughtful-looking in a child so young; though she had lots hair, her eyes were nearly black and very large—it was one of those little faces that look all eyes. Her frock was very short—about the length generally worn by children; her little sleeves were tied up with dirty bits of red ribbon, and she had on what seemed to be a pair of old dancing-shoes. There was such a strange, melancholy, wistful look about the child that I would not have liked to say, even in fun, whether she would join the dancers. Evidently her thoughts were divided between her errand and the fun that was going on. At last the music, I suppose, proved too great a temptation, and she commenced to dance too; but how differently from the rest of them! Her little legs and arms were most beautifully formed; and though the steps she did were evidently her own invention, still they were steps, and you could only wonder where such a poor, miserable-looking child could have obtained such a good idea of dancing. Nothing grotesque or vulgar—they were all graceful and pretty. I could not help laughing to see both flying in the air. Every movement of the child was grace itself. At last I called my husband to come and look at her. The regular must know that I had only been married eighteen months, and we had just left our beautiful country home—"The Oatlands," situated among the "Yorkshire Hills"—to show Fred's mother our first, and of course wonderful, baby. Wishing to take a little holiday at the same time, and intending to visit all the theatres, we took up our abode in Russell street, it being near all the places of amusement. When I pointed out my little dancing girl to Fred he laughed, and said he had no doubt it was a theatrical child; that in that neighborhood there were a people you met were fairies, demons, actors, actresses, singers, fiddlers, etc. I looked at him wonderingly, for I had never been in London before, and had never in my life seen an actress or actor off the stage. I could not believe that the half-clothed little girl before me was one of those beautiful fairy children I had seen in the pantomimes.

"Fred," I said, "let's call her in and give her some cakes, and ask her if she is a theatrical child." "Dear Fred, you are too good at times," she was called her in, and giving the organ-boy some money, also throwing some coppers to the children to scramble for, he dismissed them and said:

"Now, here is your little dancing girl—ask her all about her wee self."

Taking her by the hand and telling her not to be frightened, I asked her name.

"My name is Nelly Lennard, and I am not frightened. I am never frightened—that is why they give me the flying to do."

"Why, Fred, what on earth does she mean? What do you mean, my dear, by giving you the flying to do?"

"Why, ma'am, I am the 'Flying Fairy' at the Drury-lane Theatre."

"I told you she was a theatrical child," said Fred.

"But how poor she seems. Where does your mother live, my dear?"

"Mother lives in Russell Court, mother does, and takes in washing, and father sells trotters outside the theatre, father does. What are they?"

"Trotters, dear—what are they?" At this the child burst into a merry laugh at my not knowing what trotters were.

"Trotters, ma'am, are pigs' feet, but mother says they are called trotters 'cause the pig trots with them, you see."

"Yes, Emma, the child is correct; they are called 'trotters,' and if you notice you will see outside of the theatre a clean-looking man with a basket covered with a white cloth, and himself wearing a clean white apron, selling them hot, with pepper and salt on bread, and really to anyone who is hungry they look very tempting."

The child's eyes were staring at Fred all this time in great admiration, evidently at his superior knowledge. "Please, mister," she said, in a't it—perhaps you've been father."

Drawing the child close to me I took her little bottle out of her hand and put it on the table, saying, "Now tell me all about the 'Flying Fairy,' and how much you get for flying, and not being frightened?"

"I get six shillings a week when I fly, and when I don't fly I only get three shillings."

"Why do you only get three shillings when you don't fly?"

"Well, ma'am, you see 'cause flying is dangerous flying is."

At this Fred laughed outright, and said, "I suppose the manager gives you the extra three shillings, in case you should break your neck, to bury you with."

"No," said the child, "mother pays a penny a week for each of us to the Burying Club, and when any of us die they bury us, they do. When my little sister Kate died, mother had five pounds to bury her with, and Tom says he will have ten pounds to wear on Sundays. When father dies mother will have ten pounds to bury him with, mother will, 'cause he is a great big man. But I must go now, please, ma'am, so give me my bottle; mother will be waiting for her drop of gin."

"Gin, my dear? Does your mother drink gin?"

"Yes, I am going to get half-a-quartern of Old Tom—mother likes a crust and a glass of gin to keep her up when she's washing."

"And how many glasses does your mother drink to keep her up during the day?"

"Mother drinks two, and three half-pints of beer."

Looking at Fred I said, "Poor child, to have such a parent."

"Emma, dear, you must not think the poor woman drinks because she needs her two glasses of gin and three half-pints of beer to keep her up. Remember, dear, you like your glass of Old Port at 11 o'clock, and you are quite ready for your sherry at bottle of Bass' with your luncheon, and you have no objection to a glass of champagne at dinner."

"Well, Fred dear, I don't drink gin!"

"But you would, my darling, if you could not get wine, and you would drink beer if you could not get your Bass' ale. Now that we know what the mother takes, and the child, and her father requires to keep him up during the day."

"I don't know whether to be angry with you or not, Fred, but then you have been brought up in London, and don't mind these things." The child was looking at her bare feet this time with a most amused expression on her face, as though she thought us very stupid people. Smoothing her beautiful hair, and looking into her large eyes, I asked her if her father drank gin too, and how many drops he took during the day.

"Father drinks nothing now, father don't; poor father, mother wishes he would, 'cause she says it would cheer him a bit; but father got tight once, father did."

"Got what, my dear?"

"Tight, ma'am; he drank too much gin, and that is why he has to sell trotters. Father belonged to the theatre once, father did; he was a super; he used to get six shillings a week, and he spent it all in gin; but he never got tight until they made him captain of all the supers. Mother says that was the beginning of all our troubles, mother does."

"And what, my dear, is a super?"

"A super, ma'am, is a super; but father having been in the theatre a long time they made him master of all the supers."

Fred was watching my face all this time with a most comical expression, for, looking at the child and then at him, I was obliged to confess that I did not know what a super was.

"A super, Emma dear, is a man that has to go on the stage one minute as a 'Roman warrior,' next he has to shed scalding tears over a dead king, and the next carry a banner, and so on."

"Yes, sir," said the child, clapping her hands, "that's a super; it was carrying a banner on that got father kicked out of the theatre. You see, ma'am, he got tight, he did, and had to carry on a large banner, and a whole lot of supers had to follow him and keep atop with him. Poor father fell down in the middle of the stage, and all the other supers fell a-top of him, and the people laughed and curtain had to come down. The manager swore father should never be a super any more, and he hasn't been since. Father says he don't want to be one, for he gets more kicks than ha'pence; but mother says he must be one again, 'cause we can't live on what I make dancing, and father has to sell trotters. Father says he'll be a super again, and he'll show them how to act; but mother says he won't, 'cause he'll get tight, and then he'll be locked up, and we shall have no money coming in at all. Mother says she wishes I was a boy, 'cause then I could be a super, and get my seven shillings a week; but I'm glad I'm not a boy, for I like dancing, and I like flying, and I like the people to throw me pennies and sixpences, and I like the music, and I like the gentlemen to say I'm pretty, and I like the ladies to kiss me and say I'm a dear little girl, and I like the flowers they throw me, and I like the gentlemen to throw me bouquets, and I like the ladies to throw me bouquets, and I like the gentlemen to throw me rings, and I like the ladies to throw me rings, and I like the gentlemen to throw me purses, and I like the ladies to throw me purses, and I like the gentlemen to throw me watches, and I like the ladies to throw me watches, and I like the gentlemen to throw me chains, and I like the ladies to throw me chains, and I like the gentlemen to throw me bracelets, and I like the ladies to throw me bracelets, and I like the gentlemen to throw me brooches, and I like the ladies to throw me brooches, and I like the gentlemen to throw me—"

"Stop, stop, child!" I cried, "you will make me ill with excitement. Do you like anything else?"

"Yes,

DEFIANCE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY GIPSY.

Dost think that I fear thee, thou villain?
Dost think that I care for thy wrath,
Or fancy my calm pulses quicken
At thought of crossing thy path?
I defy both thee and thy anger;
I laugh at thy venomous threats;
Each thought of thy insolent passion
A deeper contempt begets.

Don't dare to woo me with curses,
Don't hope to purchase with gold,
Don't dream for even an instant
I'm thine to have and to hold;
I despise and reject thee, forever,
Thou "amil" of many amours!
And threatenings of danger don't frighten—
This conquest will never be yours.

Thou'rt wanting, indeed, in judgment,
And sorely lacking in sense,
To think that I, of all women,
Would yield to such weak pretense.
Away with thy threats and thy curses—
Thy cash I'd never believe—
And scheme to capture in future
Some weaker daughter of Eve.

A GAY LIEUTENANT AND A FAITHLESS WIFE.

On the 19th of April, Marshall R. Shattuck, an upholsterer, residing at 107 Bernard street, filed a complaint in the Fourth District Court against Lieutenant Samuel L. Wilson of the U. S. sloop-of-war Saranac, to recover $10,000, for damages alleged to have been sustained by the loss of his wife's love and society, resulting from her being debauched by the gay and festive Lieutenant. For some time previously Lieutenant Wilson, who is a fine-looking fellow of decidedly fast proclivities, had been dashing about the city and made much of by fashionable young ladies and their mammas. There was scarcely a party given, private or public, at which he was not the object of flattering attention, and he had the reputation among his brother officers of being the recipient of more coy glances and winning smiles than any other man in the service. Naturally enough, with his handsome person, dashing manners, inordinate vanity and susceptible nature, he was frequently involved in trouble with some lady or another; but it may be gravely supposed that he never before got into such a serious muddle with the fair sex as he lately did with the fair and frail wife of the Bernard-street upholsterer. According to the husband's complaint he had been a true and faithful spouse to Emily Shattuck, his wife, to whom he was married in this city in the month of August, 1865, but that she had not kept or regarded her marital vows or obligations to the plaintiff, having been guilty of adultery with Lieutenant Samuel L. Wilson of the Saranac. He affirms that she had carnal intercourse with the said lieutenant in the month of November in San Francisco, and again on the 30th and 31st of December subsequently, in room No. 1 of the Revere House, on the northwest corner of Fourth and Mission streets. The complaint further states that in consequence of these departures of plaintiff's wife from the path of virtue he found it necessary to contract a doctor's bill to free himself from a little trouble which occasioned him considerable annoyance, and the discovery of which brought to his knowledge his wife's infidelity, with which he taxed her and extracted a confession criminating herself and the lieutenant. It is further alleged that the faithless Emily had been guilty of other acts of adultery with Wilson, in reference to which plaintiff has not sufficient information of time and place to be specific. None of the adulteries were committed with his knowledge or by agreement or collusion, and he did not cohabit with his wife after he discovered that she was false to him. Wherefore the much deceived and grievously wronged husband prayed for damages in his favor against the meddling lieutenant of $10,000. When this suit was commenced it seemed to present so many ugly features adverse to the plaintiff Shattuck, and the defendant Wilson was believed to be such "a good young man" by a large circle of admirers, that a strong suspicion was started that a desperate attempt at blackmailing was being made. A superficial view of the case certainly seemed to justify this opinion, for it has long been an axiom in respectable society that no decent man would accept money for the dishonor of his wife, much less institute legal proceedings for the purpose. Lieutenant Wilson, therefore, was widely sympathized with in his difficulty, while the obnoxious husband was spoken of as being a man of mercenary ideas and loose moral principles. Later proceedings on the part of the husband would appear to indicate that he either became acquainted with the odium he had brought upon himself by his money suit, or awoke to a self-consciousness that the honor of his name would be best consulted by suing for a simple divorce, without any money conditions whatever. At any rate, on the 21st of the same month—two days after filing the $10,000 complaint—he commenced an action in the Fourth District Court to obtain a decree of divorce. On the second day after, the defendant's counsel, by stipulation, agreed that the default of defendant should be entered and the cause referred to Charles Halsey, the Commissioner of the Court, to take the testimony in the case. Accordingly, on the 25th the Commissioner examined witnesses. Of course, as a default had been agreed to, there was no rebutting evidence offered, and everything proceeded as smoothly as the man who once sins is said by Juvenal to go down the slippery ways of vice. According to the sworn complaint, where was no collusion between the husband and wife relative to the divorce; yet not only did the wife offer no counter statement, but she now actually appeared as the principal witness against herself, her evidence being probably the most criminatory a wife ever gave against her own character. She admitted all the charges made by her husband, specifying dates and places when and where she had been criminally intimate with the naval Lothario. Dr. P. H. Humphrey also swore that Mrs. Shattuck and Lieut. Wilson called upon him for medical treatment, and that the officer paid fees for both. On the 5th inst. the testimony was submitted, and on the following day a decree of divorce was entered. As to the suit for $10,000 against the dashing lieutenant, it is understood to have been compromised with Augustus M. Heslep, the attorney for the much-injured husband, for $350. Wilson, evidently thinking that his connection with this scandalous affair would not materially highten his honor or increase his prestige in social circles, left early last week for the East.—San Francisco (Cal.) Chronicle, May 21.

THE SOCIAL EVIL IN ST. LOUIS.

A YOUNG LADY PUNISHES HER TRADUCER.—The southeast corner of Ninth and Minna streets, San Francisco, Cal., was the scene of an interesting incident on Sunday evening, May 25. About half-past 8 o'clock a youth named George Lawless, sixteen years of age, who works in a harness shop on Front street, near Pacific, was standing on Minna street, near Ninth, with half a dozen other young fellows, engaged in conversation. While they were thus occupied, a group of four or five women came out of St. Joseph's Church, on Tenth street, and proceeded along Minna. One of them was Miss Lizzie Marchant, a girl about seventeen years of age, the daughter of E. A. Marchant, who was recently shot dead in his office by John Samuel. She was accompanied by her aunt and two or three girls about her own age. As they neared the young men Miss Marchant stepped before her companions, and approaching the other group, inquired whether George Lawless was among them. Lawless stepped forward and the girl requested the privilege of a few words privately with him. They then walked across the street together to the south side of Minna. As soon as they reached the sidewalk the girl turned suddenly upon Lawless, and, drawing a small rattan which she had concealed in the folds of her dress, began to belabor him energetically with it upon the head and shoulders. The young man, who was dumbfounded at the suddenness of the attack, retreated across the street, followed by the girl, and demanded to know why she assaulted him. She replied that he had defamed her character. He denied the charge, but the excited girl overwhelmed him by shouting hysterically, "George Lawless, you are a liar; you are a dastardly coward and a villain, to assail the character of an unprotected girl like me." Lawless was, for the moment, speechless beneath this avalanche of abuse, but he soon regained the use of his tongue and became hotly engaged in a wordy warfare with the girl, which was highly edifying to the crowd of hoodlums who gathered around with encouraging words for the contestants. Each one of the latter freely vaultilated the other's private history, and undaunted the adversary's moral failings before the highly appreciative audience of street Arabs. The wrangle continued for more than an hour, until Lawless, taking advantage of a lull in the storm, made his escape. Miss Lizzie then marched triumphantly away.

TWO YOUNG GIRLS OUTRAGED.—One of the vilest crimes taken cognizance of by the Courts is charged upon a young man named Frank Peterson, of Allegheny, Pa. The indictment, under which he has already been committed to jail, charges him with having perpetrated an outrage upon two young girls, the daughters of a Mrs. Donnody, living upon First street, in the Third Ward. Peterson has for some time been boarding at the house, and it is alleged that some two weeks since, by threats and force, he succeeded in accomplishing his designs upon the oldest daughter, a girl of fifteen years. Still later the other daughter, who is but ten years of age, it is charged, fell a prey to his licentiousness and was made the victim of a forcible outrage. The crimes were discovered, and as soon as possible a warrant was issued and the man taken into custody. It is stated that had this been done, Peterson would the infuriated neighborhood. After a hearing before the magistrate the prisoner was held for trial.

A GOOD CHARACTER is to a young man what a firm foundation is to the artist who proposes to erect a building on it; he can build with safety, and, as all who behold it will have confidence in its solidity, a helping hand will never be wanted. But let a single part of this be defective, and you go on hazard, amid doubting and distrust, and ten to one it will tumble down at last, and mingle all that was built on it in ruins.

A SWEEPSTAKES.

On Thursday a sweepstakes of $150 each, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, between James K. Polk (formerly Cloudman), Topsy and Fred, came off, and proved the best contested trot of the season up to this time. James K. Polk, on the strength of his easily obtained victory at Deerfoot Park the week previous, was made the favorite, selling in pools for $20; Topsy, $18; and Fred $15. Polk won the first heat with seeming ease. The second resulted in a dead heat between the favorite and Fred, after a beautiful struggle. Fred (who was driven by the veteran James D. McMann, rarely seen with the ribbons since the days when he drove Flora Temple and Lady Thorn) was now installed as favorite over the field, and a more desperate head-and-head contest between him and James K. Polk for three-quarters of a mile has rarely been witnessed. After passing the third quarter pole, Polk began to hang out symptoms of distress; and Fred, quitting him, won the heat in a jog, Topsy being a bad third. Fred was now backed to win the race at $100 to $20, but after a close struggle Topsy beat him across the score by a few inches, the quondam favorite barely saving his distance, and so badly tired was he that his trainer begged and obtained the judges' permission to withdraw him, as he was suffering from the thumps greatly. The betting was now $100 to $50 on Fred, who won the fifth and sixth heats and the race easily. Summary:

SALE OF RACING STOCK.—In consequence of the death of Mr. John Shedden, an influential Canadian turfman, his racing stock were brought to the hammer at Montreal on the 31st ult. The celebrated thoroughbred stallion Thunder, own brother to Lodestone, Lancaster and Lightning, was withdrawn at $1,000, but a three-year-old colt by him realized $900. Some valuable imported broodmares sold remarkably low: Poetess, by Hobbie Noble, with chestnut filly foal by Scottish Chief (the sire of the Oaks winner, Marie Stuart), only bringing $875; Sweetbread by Dunchany, with colt by Speculum, the Goodwood Cup winner, $1,125; Lady Linton by Lord Clifden (the St. Leger winner), with colt by Scottish Chief, $1,200; Castaway, by Weatherbit, with colt foal by Speculum, $1,225; and Fidget, by Ely, with filly foal by Saunterer, $1,200. The sale realized a total of $23,600.

DEATH OF JUPITER.—The famous trotting stallion Jupiter, owned by Dr. Rich of Ogden, N. Y., died of spasmodic colic last week. He was foaled in 1849, and was by Long Island Black Hawk out of Gipsy by Almack; second dam by Engineer, a son of imported Messenger. His stock were all speedy and unusually handsome in appearance; among them are the renowned mare Lady Emma, Thorn's Jupiter, Young Jupiter, Juno, Pearsall, etc. Jupiter was never regularly trained for the turf, but Hiram Woodruff, who had a very high opinion of him, two or three times handled him to ascertain his powers, and in a trial of heats in harness trotted both of them in the twenties.

PURCHASE OF BROODMARES.—Mr. Welch of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, has purchased two broodmares of Mr. A. D. Magraw, with trotting colts at their sides. One is the chestnut mare Lemonade, 11 years old, by Lexington out of Lilla by imported Yorkshire, and therefore an own sister to General Duke and Chillicothe. The other is the bay mare Minnie Minehart, 9 years old, by imported Scythian out of Dora by Decatur. The trotting colts Mr. Welch sold for $100 each, and intends breeding the mares to his great stallion Leamington.

ORY.—The proposed trot for a purse of $1,500 given by the Fleetwood Park Association for American Girl and J. H. Conley (formerly Beppo) to wagon, the latter catch-weight, and Nonesuch in harness, announced to take place on Friday, 6th inst., was indefinitely postponed in consequence of the two last-named horses having gone amiss the day previous. So it is said.

TWO TROTS, each for $100, came off at Mystic Park, Medford, Mass., May 30. The first was won by D. C. Keay's Jim Fisk, defeating Doctor and Fanny, each of whom took one heat. Time, 2:54; 2:50; 2:48½; 2:49½; 2:52¾. The second race was won by E. L. Norcross' ch g Auburn Boy, who took the second, third and fourth heats, the first being captured by Stranger. The other competitors were Honest Brock, Lady Wentworth and Ludlow Boy. Time, 2:38¾; 2:37½; 2:40; 2:39¾.

THE MIDDLE GRANVILLE (N. Y.) DRIVING PARK was opened to the public May 31, when a trot for a purse of $50 came off. The starters were Belle of Pawlet, Dolly Varden, Stole Away, Kitty Lewis, Gipsy Girl and Birdy, the former winning in three straight heats. Time, 2:50; 2:50; 2:54.

BASEBALL.

BOSTON vs. MUTUAL.

An Exciting Contest of Twelve Innings.

In our last issue we had occasion to read the Mutuals a lecture on their lack of attention to those essentials of success in a professional nine which lead to well-earned victories in the field and satisfactory returns from gate receipts. We then referred to the fact that in playing strength, as regards the individual skill of their team, they were not inferior to the best, and that their defeats this season were not warranted by any inferiority in regard to players. In support of this statement the club nine, by their display in the field on the occasion of their third contest with the champion nine this season—played in Brooklyn, June 3—proved conclusively that it was not the lack of players of note and ability, but the want of efficient training and management, that had led to the disastrous results of their May campaign.

The occasion in question was the second appearance of the champion "Red Stockings" in Brooklyn this season, and it may be said by way of preface that they fully displayed their superiority as one of the best trained and managed nines of the country, for it was by their strategic skill and that superiority of nerve which careful training alone yields that they were enabled to escape defeat. They were decidedly outbatted in the game, and they displayed none of that marked superiority in fielding skill which gave them the lead over other nines last year. It is unnecessary to describe the game in detail by innings, although reference to the special plays made will be of interest to our general readers.

THE GAME.

Play was called at 3.40 P. M. by Burdock of the Atlantics, and the Bostons were sent to the bat. Giving easy chances to short field for throwing them out, they retired in the order they came to the bat. The Mutuals began with a similar way, but their third striker, Hatfield, sent the very ratan elastic ball, which Harry Wright had negligently furnished, down to the right field for three earned bases, and as Start hit safely for his first base, Hatfield scored and earned his run. This gave the lead to the New Yorkers in the very outset by a score of 1 to 0. The next inning yielded neither party any thing, but in the third Bellan opened safely at the bat, and as Hatfield again got a ball to suit him, this time he scored a home-run, two runs being scored and earned, the champions thus far having drawn blanks. In the fourth inning errors by Hatfield and Hicks assisted the Reds to their two runs on two base hits, the New Yorkers offsetting these with another earned run, obtained by the good hits of Holdsworth—a three-baser—and Eggler, the score now standing at 4 to 2 in favor of the Mutuals, who thus far had completely outplayed the "Reds" at the bat. In the fifth inning errors by Eggler, Start and Hicks gave the "Reds" two more runs on a single-base hit, the score now being 4 to 4. In the seventh the Mutuals scored an uncarned run by George Wright's error, the "Reds" gaining a run by an important muff by Eggler, two base hits being scored. From this point both sides finely contested the game, the champions never for a moment "giving up the ship," even when defeat stared them directly in the face. The Mutuals, however, lacked nerve and judgment in the most critical period of the contest, and hence lost the game. Hicks was excusable for his errors to the extent of his having a badly hurt forefinger. Under the circumstances he played very pluckily. The close of the ninth inning saw the game a tie, 5 to 5, and now the contest became intensely interesting to all present. The New Yorkers had the sympathy of the crowd with them, but it was expressed in anything but a manner creditable to the assemblage, inasmuch as when the Reds attempted to bat fair fouls there were jeers and hisses, and yet when the Mutuals did the same thing applause was in order. The outside crowd of roughs made Harry Wright a special target for abuse, as they apparently do everything that bears the mark of honesty and respectability. The tenth and eleventh innings yielded no runs to either side, the two nines finding their respective opponents active in the field and efficient in serving their strong batteries. In the twelfth inning Hatfield was sent in Martin to pitch, and but for the change back again in the twelfth inning it is questionable if the Mutuals would have been defeated. The twelfth inning opened with the Bostons at the bat, George Wright opening with a fair foul. By a low under-pitch of Mathews' he reached his third base, Barnes' safe bounder to Eggler sending him home. Before another pitch could be got in, the side were put out, Hicks making two fine catches. This left the Reds in the van, and the Mutuals now went in to get two to win and one to tie. Holdsworth led off with a two-baser, and things looked promising for the required runs, especially when a muff by George Wright gave Eggler a life. Bellan then had his base given him on called balls, and each man advanced a base. Here were three men on bases and no man out, and the chances for getting a run in were ten to one in favor of the batting side. Hatfield now came to the bat. He had been batting well, and now even a high fly to the outfield, resulting in a catch, would have secured a run. Instead, however, he sent a hot ball to George, who promptly forwarded it to White, and Holdsworth was cut off at home base. Still but one man was out and three men were again on the bases. Start now came to the bat, and a good hit was longed for by the crowd as it never was before; but Joe hit a high foul instead, and White had another victim. It was now Martin's turn, and he hit a good one to Barnes; but the ball reached Manning in time—and the jig was up. Six men to the bat, three on the bases twice, and not a run scored. Hatfield left his base and stood between bases, tempting the Reds to put him out, but the point was too fine, and the Reds would not see it. Better umpiring than that of Burdock in this game has not been seen this season. Cool and collected, intelligent in interpreting the rules, determined in enforcing them, and thoroughly impartial, he well merited the praise awarded him on all sides as the best umpire thus far of the season. The feature of the fielding was the thoughtful, the ideas, are subject to no other trammels than those relating to the composition, the construction. But these trammels are binding, and exact the most patient study from the poet or the composer, in order to fashion his creations therewith. There is no rising above them. Whether it be the author of "In Memoriam," or the authoress of the last poem on "Our Dead Baby;" whether it be a Kleti or a Dollinger, these restrictions must be met alike.

The systematization of such restrictions as apply to the construction of Chess Problems was the "problem" I found it convenient to "solve" in order methodically to class the works of KLING which I was passing in review. This is a very different "problem" from the one that "X" would ask me to "solve." As far as tried, my "solution" seems to work well. Moreover, the definitions have received the sanction of some of the best judges in this department of Chess, having been pronounced by many, both publicly and privately, to be a fair interpretation of the prevailing views as to accuracy of construction. These definitions are not fanciful or empirical. They create nothing; they simply give a name to what already exists. They point out plain distinctions. No two persons can differ in applying them. There is no problem they fail to reach. They form a standard by which the minutiæ derivable from perfection can be easily detected, and placed in its proper category. They do not relate to what is a mere matter of opinion; they fix the position of the problem in the scale of excellence. They passed on to the Arbitrio elegantiæ for their opinions as to its general excellence. It is at this point that the element of doubt enters. If, after having been pronounced not Faulty, or Unsound, by the critical examiner, its status as to fineness come in question, how various will be the opinions offered! One will pronounce it "neat," another "pretty," another "beautiful," another "elegant," and so on. As many men, so many minds. Indeed, the same mind will give different decisions according to its mood. And there is no arbitrender—there scarcely can be one until it is satisfactorily settled which takes the best, jemon pie or mince pie—that will indicate the unmistakeable position of the problem. If such a tester ever be invented, I shall be among the first to applaud.

One thing is plain, and "X" must have known it, even though he failed in his attempt to master them, that my definitions were not intended to serve as any such tester. Few could unintentionally so pervert the sense of the terms perfect, imperfect, defective, faulty and unsound, as to make them refer to the "quality of the idea," instead of the manner of rendering it.

CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT.

THE CHESS RECORD.—The 3d No. is even better than its predecessor. It would require ten distinct titles to enumerate its contents. Pennsylvania State C. Ass'n.; educational articles on odds of K Kt and Rook; Theodore Tilton on Morphy, again; opening of Ernest Morphy's "Uncle of Chess"—besides all the usual standard matter of great variety and excellence.

PEDESTRIANISM.

GREAT WALKING FEAT IN ENGLAND.—Some time ago Major the Hon. J. Colburn undertook for a wager with a friend to walk five miles in the hour, carrying a 6½lb brick in each hand; he failed on the first, but succeeded in the second attempt. Subsequently another match was made, for £100 a side, according to which Major Colburn undertook to walk fifteen miles in three hours, carrying a 6½lb brick in each hand, with liberty to hold the brick in whatever way he chose. The start took place about a mile from Ashford, Eng., on the Maidstone road, the whole country-side turning out to witness the performance, which extended over a course of three miles in length. The Major—who is forty-three years of age—went off at

The man has to pay up the deficit out of what little he has saved during the season. What's he take a benefit for? He believes that he will be able to clear a hundred or so; his friends assure him that they will support him, that the public will be only too glad of the opportunity to show their appreciation, and all that sort of stuff. And don't they? Why, no; they never give it a thought after that, and the victim of misplaced confidence wonders that he has no few friends when he sees such a scant attendance. Some of them do well, don't they? Yes, such as managerial favorites, handsome, flashy women, and the likes of them. The manager takes care that they don't suffer—"such is the way of the world."..... Came near seeing a fight last Saturday night. It was about a ballet girl, two fond hearts claiming her "for his own." The girl will consult her own welfare by letting them both go. Such language as they used was shocking. Why is world hour afforded Comstock and the Young Men's Christian Association a chance for the arrest of the parties for male-ing obscene literature. You never heard anything like it, and you have heard a great deal in your wicked lives. What did the police do with them? Sold 'em over to Wood-ward, Beecher & Co., to expound their wisdom and skylights and things after burglars. We made some cunning poetry about it when we got home. Here it is:

IT FOR A HAVOC.

We witnessed last night a real funny sight—
A fracas that promised to end in a fight:
Each man shook his fist in the other one's face,
But stopped as the "mill" between Coburn and Mace
Seemed the height of fun; when forced to desist
Neither man had been touched by the other one's fist;
And we said, as disgusted we turn'd for to go,
Much blowing we've heard, but have not seen a blow."

Well you another funny thing. This is about a wild animal. We might in confidence say to such of our readers as are easily frightened by such stories that nobody was hurt. A play was got up to show off the great power exercised over the brute creation by one Diomid Larzello. There was one scene in which he was "bully Ike," so to speak. The stage had entered, and this mind you, without doing a thing. But prithee hold your horses—anon you shall learn why they acted thus strangely. Then came the great scene, which had been gotten up at enormous cost, for it required 1,000 francs. We knew the feeling of our moral society, although Madelein is a frail sister-hood, living right before the audience as the kept mistress of a few lord, yet all our sympathies go out towards her when she gets into trouble, and we long to see the innocent and virtuous bride Marguerite stricken down with heart-disease or something, in the cathedral, instead of the heretofore sinful Madelein. Likewise we abhor that precious villain Frederick who, to preserve "the honor of his house," chases to persuade the Morel girl to connect herself with that family. "Humpty Dumpty" on the wall is seen no more. All the soldiers in the land couldn't make "Humpty" stand longer, so on Saturday night George ceased from his labors at the Olympic. There was not a large audience to see him off. The Joe Brothers, who is manly enough to smell fire with J—cause in for a round or two for their performance on the Rock Harmonicon, which ought to fill their pockets with rocks, so skillfully do they work together. The Grand Opera-house looked sick, and Poehler for poorly, the house being much too large for the small people in attendance. Nearly all places of amusement are taking in sail in view of warm weather and the coolness of theatre-goers. There is one thing noticeable just now—benefits are in order at several houses; managers never omit to give their people benefits as the close of a dull season. May be you have never noticed this. Why do they give benefits when it's dull? Because the beneficiaires draw larger audiences than would otherwise be present, and the manager is rather a gainer by the operation. Do all the people have benefits? Oh no, some of them can't afford it, it's only the big people that enjoy this luxury. Isn't every benefit sure to put money in the pocket of the beneficiare? Bless your poor deluded soul, no; why, it not infrequently happens that when a beneficiaire has settled up as far as he can go, he finds himself still in debt to the amount of one or two hundred dollars. And the manager makes that good, of course? Of course he does no such thing—

THE REGULAR SEASON at the Olympic Theatre closed with the performances of Saturday evening, June 7, when "Humpty Dumpty" was acted for the last time. During the past revival it was acted one hundred and twenty-seven times. Mlle. Morlacchi did not appear during the past week, having closed her engagement on May 31. We present the following

SUMMARY OF THE PAST SEASON:

THE SEASON opened under the management of James E. Hayes, Samuel Colville and Alexander Henderson, Sept. 2, 1872, when "The Red Pocketbook" was produced and acted until the 16th, when Miss Charlotte Thompson commenced an engagement. "One Wife"—which had been originally acted at this theatre during the Summer season—was revived and performed until the 24th, when "The Hunchback" was produced, and ran until the close of Miss Thompson's engagement on the 28th. The theatre was then closed for the purpose of redecoration and making some alterations in the seats in the auditorium. It was reopened on Oct. 14, when the Aimee Opera Bouffe Company commenced a season, with "La Perichole," which ran until the 18th, and on that evening and Oct. 19, 21, 22, 23, "La Grande Duchesse" was performed. On the 20th the character of Eleanor Vaughn in "Davy Crockett" was revived, and on the 24th "Genevieve de Brabant" was produced, and ran until Nov. 2, inclusive. On the 4th "La Perichole" was revived, and between the acts an infant prodigy named Romeo Donesi, who sang operatic selections, made his American debut, but failed to please, and was withdrawn after that night. On the 5th, 6th, 7th and 9th 'Barbe Bleue' was sung, and on the 8th "La Grande Duchesse." On the 11th the Parisian Burlesque Company commenced an engagement in "Aladdin II," which ran until the 29th, when "Kenilworth" was produced and acted until Dec. 7 inclusive. On the 30th "Barbe Bleue" was revived and repeated at the matinee on the 7th, when the Thompson Troupe closed their engagement, in the evening Kellyand Leon received a benefit, when a variety performance was given. On the 9th the Aimee Opera Bouffe Troupe opened in "La Belle Helene," which was repeated Dec. 10, 11, 12, and matinee 13, when "La Perichole" was sung. On the 13th "The Alhambra"—a spectacular burlesque—was to have been produced, but not being ready the theatre was not opened on that evening. It was produced on the 14th and ran until Jan. 18, when the season closed. Messrs. Colville and Henderson withdrew from the management, disposing of their interests to James E. Hayes, who reopened the theatre on Feb. 17 with "Humpty Dumpty," which ran until June 7 inclusive, which terminated the regular season. James E. Hayes the manager died on May 7, and the theatre was closed on Friday evening, May 9, out of respect to his memory.

HARRY STANWOOD and J. H. Savori are up for a benefit at Bryant's Minstrels, on Saturday, June 14. "The man who talks" says that postal cards, fans and ice water on draught will be features in the auditorium, while the stage entertainment will be of an unusually interesting character.

THE BEST EVERGREEN at any of our city theatres during last week was at the Fifth Avenue, but even there the auditorium was not filled. "Madelein Morel" has achieved success, and will doubtless continue the attraction until the end of the season. Miss Clara Morris remained under management benefit on June 9, and Miss Fanny Davenport on the 11th.

THE FIRST PUBLIC PERFORMANCE was given in the new Masonic Hall, at the corner of Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue, on Thursday evening, June 5, for the benefit of the Hall and Asylum Fund, consisting of a lecture on "Dialect Humor," by W. S. Andrews. The hall is still in an unfinished condition, and as two sides of it are composed almost entirely of windows, which were open, the current of air manned to a certain extent the effect of the lecture, which was entertaining and humorous. Mr. Andrews—who will be remembered as an actor of much promise at the Winter Garden some few years since—was quite successful in his imitation of the various dialects commented upon. The attendance was fair.

WILLIAM HEPARTY, formerly manager of the Winter Garden, while walking down the main stairway at the Police Headquarters on June 6, became dizzy when near the foot of the stairs, and fell over the balustrade to the main floor below, a distance of some fifteen feet. Fortunately, he struck upon his right shoulder, and received no further injury than a severe bruise, although he remained insensible for more than half an hour. He was attended by a police surgeon, and afterwards removed to his room at the Police Headquarters.

AN ENTIRE NEW COMPANY known as the Hernandez Combination performed at the Athenæum during the past week. The performances opened with a farce entitled "The Stagestruck Chambermaid," in which Miss Lina Price will appear. The five comedies presented by Fred. T. Shaw and J. Welch. A. M. Hernandez then performed a comic guitar solo, which was liberally applauded. Mlle. Ida Devere appeared to advantage in a Flower Dance, and later in the evening in a Scotch Strathspey. Lina Delmay, who sang a few comic songs, was several times encored. She is petite, pretty, was tastefully costumed, and sang well. Prof. Hilton introduced his three talking heads, and gave further exhibition of his ventriloquial powers. Master Harry Bleeker, a lad of twelve years, sang "Barney Fred," and, in response to several encores, sang songs of his own composition adapted to familiar airs. "The Boston Peace Jubilee," which terminated the performances, elicited shouts of laughter. A. M. Hernandez and Prof. Hilmore was musical director. Arthur Hernandez performed a burlesque corset solo. Young America, clad in elegant female costume, sang a burlesque aria, and took the audience completely by surprise by turning a somersault. The attendance was good. The regular company under R. W. Butler's management return the present week.

FRANK MAYO acted at the evening performances and Saturday matinee of the past week at Wood's Museum in "Davy Crockett," which was well mounted and attracted a liberal attendance. Miss Rosa Rand, who made her first appearance during the present engagement, was in the quadrain effective manner the character of Eleanor Vaughn. Mr. Mayo's conception and interpretation of Davy Crockett deserve high commendation, and the support was all that could be desired. At the customary matinee on June 7 Mr. Mayo appeared in the latter days to bring out points that were never dreamed of in the remote past. Are the American performers equal to European? Equal-to them! Why, they are far ahead of them. In nearly every department the circus performer of America excels those of other parts of the world. Like everything else in this country, the circus is up with the demands of the times, and its progress is onward—no backward leaps here, except those seen in the arena. However, we are not disposed to bore our theatre friends with scorn; oh, no, we allow the largest liberty to all our subjects, and therefore we cheerfully give place to the following lines by one who still stands up for the old sawdust ring:

THE MOTLEY.

When gazing at the mimic show
That centres in the brilliant ring,
Strange thoughts will now and then arise
Of days when youth was in its spring;
Of days when "Here we are again!"
Would thrill through every nerve and vein,
Like the inspiring notes of a regular charge
Blown shrill upon the battle plain.
The grand entree! What tournament,
With knights and lords and look on,
Had half the charm of this which now
In life's decline we gaze upon;
And where is now the spangled show
Wore ever such a winning grace
To our young eyes as her whose steed
Yon swain did win the sawdust chase.
With grace awe than language could
By olden sorcery we cased,
Upon the vaulters leaping high.
Though off to boys' heads the locks sailings hazed.
We see them still, their spangled forms
Revolving through the dusty air,
And laugh at those inspiring jokes
In tones enough the house to scare;
And though the circus has of late
Been a great contributor given to thing,
It "can't begin," in our esteem,
To cope with that old-fashioned ring!

CITY SUMMARY.

"THE CORSICAN BROTHERS" was produced at the Grand Opera-house on June 2, and acted during the week, with Charles Fechter as the representative of the twin brothers, Louis and Fabien dei Franchi. This same version of the drama had been previously acted at the Fourteenth-street Theatre. It affords Mr. Fechter but little scope for the display of his peculiar abilities, and is by no means as good a version as we have hitherto seen. The best, we think, presented in this city was first acted at the Astor-place Opera-house, the late G. V. Brooke performing the brothers. There are, however, several of the salient features of the three-act French drama, to which had been added a first and a last act. The printed version, which is usually performed, and which was first acted in America at the Bowery Theatre, on April 31, 1852, with E. Eddy in the cast, by Mrs. Bedell, Mrs. Jarrett, Mr. Langrgan, Rachel Noah, Mary Davenport, May Fisk, Louisa Morse, Mrs. Ashton, Lotta Connolly, Belle Dudley, Mary Morse and Mattie A. Manning.

A PORTION OF THE STOCK COMPANY from the Pittsburgh, Pa., Opera-house, commenced a traveling season of eight weeks at Steubenville, O., on June 2. The Irving Comedy Company is their title, Hattie and Nellie Irving the stars, and the management as follows: J. Edwin Irving, manager; E. Murray Day, treasurer; W. H. Crompton, stage director; Prof. Eisenbrant, musical director, and H. E. Manchester, advance agent. They are to commence a six nights' season at Coshocton, O., June 9, thence to New Philadelphia for three nights, and through the northern part of Ohio.

ARRANGEMENTS desiring to purchase an original drama can address "Play," care of this office.

CASSIE TROY and Samuel E. Ryan can be engaged to produce George Murray's copyrighted play, "Divorced." Communications can be addressed as directed in advertisement.

HERNANDEZ FOSTER can be addressed as per advertisement.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON and a dramatic company are to act "Rip Van Winkle" at the Tootle Opera-house, St. Joseph, Mo., June 11.

CHARLOTTE THOMPSON and company are to perform at Scranton, Pa., July 3, 4, 5.

LAWRENCE BARRETT and company are to perform this week at London, Ont., Hamilton, Buffalo, N. Y., June 13, 14, thence to Titusville, Elmira, Syracuse, Pittsfield, Mass., etc.

CHARLES G. FLINT, the lessee of the St. James Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., is to receive a benefit from the Meech & Brothers on June 10, when the Academy company will perform "Dora."

JOSEPH PROCTOR commences an engagement at the Theatre Royal, Montreal, Canada, June 9. Dominick Murray closed there June 7.

MISS ZOE is at present sojourning at her Summer residence, Hempstead, L. I., and all letters can be addressed to her agent, Mr. Ben Yates.

WM. T. MADIGAN states through a card elsewhere that he has disposed of his drama "Found at Last" to Charles Lovell.

A DRAMATIC COMPANY is wanted for a season of ten months, commencing Aug. 3, at the Globe Theatre, Chicago, Ill., and stars and combinations will be treated with on liberal terms. Address as per card in another column.

HARRY MEREDITH advertises that he has for disposal a new five-act play entitled "A Stay of Proceedings," suitable for an Irish character comedian or lady star.

USEFUL ARTISTS are wanted for J. A. Simon's Star Comedy Company for the Fall season, commencing at St. Louis, Mo., about Aug. 1. Address as per advertisement.

LOUISE HAWTHORNE is referred to a card in another column.

MISS EFFIE WARREN was married to J. Kingsley Fairman of Elmira, N. Y., at Nashua, N. H., May 19, by the Rev. Mr. Weatherbee.

MISS ROSA RAND has been engaged by Frank Mayo to travel with him during the coming season and act the character of Eleanor Vaughn in "Davy Crockett."

FRANK MAYO commences an engagement at the California Theatre, San Francisco, Cal., on July 14.

LAWRENCE BARRETT and dramatic company are to perform at Titusville, Pa., June 16, 17.

LAURA KEENE and her dramatic company were in Indianapolis, Ind., June 5, 6, 7.

J. HOLMES GROVER will commence his season of 1873 and '74 at Philadelphia the latter part of August, and has vacant dates after Nov. 8, for which he can be secured to produce "I. O. U." See advertisement.

AMONG THE ARRIVALS during the past week were John Owens, Theodore Hamilton, R. Healey of the Herndon Troupe, Harry Robinson of minstrel fame, E. N. Gotthold, agent, and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Herndon of Herndon's dramatic company, which just closed a successful season of over forty weeks.

J. B. BOOTH arrived from England by the steamship Scotia on June 4.

MRS. CHANFRAU will, probably, play a star engagement at a leading theatre in this city next season. It was desired to afford her an opportunity to appear at the Union-square Theatre this Summer, but she declined the offer.

DRAMATIC.

To Managers, Agents, Doorkeepers and Others.

To every authorized correspondent of THE NEW YORK CLIPPER we have issued a card of a LIGHT-GREEN COLOR, with an engraving of THE CLIPPER BUILDING on one side, and on the other the name of the correspondent, city, etc., signed by the proprietor of the paper, with the stamp of the office and date of March 1, 1873, affixed thereunto, each card running for six months. No person is authorized to use any other card, and all showmen are earnestly requested not to recognize or extend favors to any person on behalf of THE CLIPPER unless he can produce a card like the above. Parties applying for the position of correspondent are respectfully requested to consider silence a negative.

THE BELDEN-IRWIN COMBINATION commenced a five nights' season at Cairo, Ill., on June 3. They perform at Paducah, Ky., 9, 10, 11, and at Robinson's Opera-house, Cincinnati, O., one week commencing the 30th.

FANNY B. PRICE and her dramatic company, who performed during the past week at Lancaster, O., are announced for a like period at Circleville, commencing June 9.

NED BUNTLINE'S "SCOUTS OF THE PRAIRIE" TROUPE performed at Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 2, Scranton 3, 4, Bennington 5, Owego, N. Y., 6, Elmira 7 and remain the 9th.

THE GREAT WESTERN COMBINATION closed the season at Marine City, Mich., on May 31, and Gabriella Grey and Frank G. Campbell returned to Jackson City to organize for the coming season. A full company and a band leader are advertised for.

J. M. KECKTON, doorkeeper of the Seventeenth-street Theatre, Philadelphia, took his annual benefit June 2, presenting "Meg's Diversion" and "Simpson & Co.," with Mr. E. Bartram as Jeremy Crow and Mr. Simpson. The pieces were well given, but, we regret to say, to a moderate attendance.

R. BELMONT has for disposal two plays, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" and "Through the Dark." Address as per card elsewhere.

DOLLIE BIDWELL'S comedy company, now traveling in the Eastern circuit, were in Maine last week, meeting with a fair share of patronage. Dollie is, therefore, "the Star of the East" at present.

EMMETT & GAYTON'S Irish Comedy Company were billed at Cumberland, Md., for June 2, 3, 4, but closed with the second night's performance.

AMUSEMENTS IN CHICAGO, ILL., are reported as appended by our correspondent under date of June 5: "The burlesque of 'Pocahontas' re-christened 'Ye Gentle Savage'—was presented at Hooley's Opera-house on June 2, and witnessed by a large and enthusiastic audience. The present version is simply a burlesque on a burlesque. The scenic effects were rich and in keeping with the elegant theatre. The second evening showed an improvement in the acting, but not sufficient to make 'Ye Gentle Savage' a success. The burlesque was preceded nightly by the elegant one-act comedy 'A Pretty Piece of Business,' in which Mr. J. W. Norris, John Dillon, Kate Meek and Josie Batchelder appeared to their usual commendable manner. Business continues excellent. At McVicker's Theatre the Kate Putnam Troupe commenced an engagement on the 2d, producing a new play by T. C. De Leon, Esq., entitled 'Bet, or Through Fire and Water.' The plot from a literary point of view possesses little merit, and has three times failed to awaken any enthusiasm on the part of the audiences. The attendance has been light up to the present writing. Miss Putnam continues to make as much out of the character of Bert and Bricktop as possible, but that is not saying much. As Miss Putnam is a deserving little actress, we will refrain from giving more about her or the company until they are seen in some play better suited to them..... The spectacular play soon to be produced at Aiken's Theatre is entitled 'Zoloa.' It will be presented on the 16th and will embrace among others the following talent: J. Frank Northrup, tenor; Henry Peakes, basso; Miss Isabella Motte, soprano; Morlacchi, Mlle. Jeannette, Mr. C. Gonesse, the Berger Family with their musical music. The scenic display is by J. H. Halley, and transformation scenes by J. Sommer Getz; costumes by Mr. Bullock. It is thought that it will prove to be the grandest spectacular production yet witnessed in Chicago."

AT CORINTHIAN HALL, St. Louis, Mo., Pauline Markham, in her second week, 9, 10, 11, 12, as Prince Baric in a burlesque entitled "Prince Silver Heels." Our correspondent writing on June 6 comments as follows: "Prince Baric serves well to display Miss Markham's talent and grace of form. Her fencing, though not characterized by a reckless dash, is pleasing and acceptable for this reason. Harry Allen as Queen Blondinetti was excellent. As King Lachryme, Geo. Morton was good, as was the company generally in its support. The variety performers who appeared in their specialties were Mlle. Zitella in serio-comic selections, Lizzie Scemple in a skipping-rope jig, Prof. Fox in his imitations of birds and animals, Cogill and Cooper in double song-and-dance, Mlle. Zitella and the Varrella Brothers in acrobatic and posturing feats, John Manning blindfolded on the swinging trapeze, and Prof. O'Reardon's tumbleronicon performance, all of which gave unlimited satisfaction and proved a strong attraction, to which strength more was added by the participation of Mlle. Ricci and her corps de ballet. The business has been fine throughout the week, and may possibly be prevented a continuance of the present engagement. John Manning last night fell from the bar while performing upon the trapeze, fell from the bar to the stage, a distance of about sixteen or eighteen feet, striking upon his head and shoulders, rendering him quite insensible. He was carried from the stage and medical aid summoned. The physician pronounced his injuries severe, though not necessarily dangerous. Mr. Manning complained of a dizzy sensation prior to going upon the bar, but would not be induced to omit his part in the night's entertainment, which by the sequel came very near proving fatal to himself. Unless he is internally injured he will no doubt reappear soon."

FROM CINCINNATI our correspondent writes as follows: "Lee's Indians, or Forepaugh's Indians, Forepaugh's troupe of performing Kaw and Comanche Indians have been the attraction this week, drawing fairly. The party consists of two women, a boy and some twelve warriors, who give their native songs and dances, shoot arrows, etc. The entertainment lasts about an hour, and is chiefly interesting as an exposition of savage habits. The big chief of the party enveloped in himself too much Cincinnati lager on Wednesday, and became so demonstrative with his affection for the pale-faces that the police had to escort him to the station-house, where he spent the night. Up to midnight he repeated a soliloquy, consisting of the line 'Me go home,' very many times, but at the solemn hour of twelve he elevated the suggestive statement, 'Barnum bad man.' The party closes here to-morrow night. Next week they play in Xenia, Columbus, Newark and Steubenville, and on the 16th open in Pittsburgh, their route being thence towards New York. The week's is to be Tony Pastor on the 23d..... At Robinson's Opera-house H. H. Palmer is to make her debut on the stage next Wednesday evening, as Fanchon. On Thursday and Friday the theatre is engaged for dramatic purposes by one of the schools. On Saturday A. M. Griswold the Great Contributor gives an entertainment. On the 30th the Belden-Irwin Combination open here."

CHARLOTTE STANLEY, with her sensational play "Crime, or the Car-Hook Murder," is spoken of by Geo. J. Deagle of St. Louis as a "big paying card" and an admirable actress. Managers desiring to secure her for the season of 1873 and '74 can address her agent as per advertisement.

M. B. LEAVITT'S COMBINATION close their present traveling season at Wheeling, W. Va., June 14, and will start out on their first of September.

THE SIR JOHN, N. B., DRAMATIC COMPANY, under the management of J. W. Lanergan, assisted by W. H. Daly, stage-manager; William Nannery, box-office keeper, and F. A. Muller, opened for the season on Thursday evening, June 5, with "The Lady of Lyons" to a crowded house. The company was as follows: J. W. Lanergan, Henry H. Wood, J. B. Fuller, Walter Lennox, P. Connolly, Shirley H. France, E. A. McDowell, J. L. Ashton, George C. Jordan, Jr., C. L. Pierson, F. P. Bonald, W. H. Daly, H. Rees Davis, W. Scott, Miss Beady, Mrs. J. W. Lanergan, Rachel Noah, Mary Davenport, May Fisk, Louisa Morse, Mrs. Ashton, Lotta Connolly, Belle Dudley, Mary Morse and Mattie A. Manning.

A PORTION OF THE STOCK COMPANY from the Pittsburgh, Pa., Opera-house, commenced a traveling season of eight weeks at Steubenville, O., on June 2. The Irving Comedy Company is their title, Hattie and Nellie Irving the stars, and the management as follows: J. Edwin Irving, manager; E. Murray Day, treasurer; W. H. Crompton, stage director; Prof. Eisenbrant, musical director, and H. E. Manchester, advance agent. They are to commence a six nights' season at Coshocton, O., June 9, thence to New Philadelphia for three nights, and through the northern part of Ohio.

HERNANDEZ FOSTER can be addressed as per advertisement.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON and a dramatic company are to act "Rip Van Winkle" at the Tootle Opera-house, St. Joseph, Mo., June 11.

CHARLOTTE THOMPSON and company are to perform at Scranton, Pa., July 3, 4, 5.

LAWRENCE BARRETT and company are to perform this week at London, Ont., Hamilton, Buffalo, N. Y., June 13, 14, thence to Titusville, Elmira, Syracuse, Pittsfield, Mass., etc.

CHARLES G. FLINT, the lessee of the St. James Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., is to receive a benefit from the Meech & Brothers on June 10, when the Academy company will perform "Dora."

JOSEPH PROCTOR commences an engagement at the Theatre Royal, Montreal, Canada, June 9. Dominick Murray closed there June 7.

MISS ZOE is at present sojourning at her Summer residence, Hempstead, L. I., and all letters can be addressed to her agent, Mr. Ben Yates.

WM. T. MADIGAN states through a card elsewhere that he has disposed of his drama "Found at Last" to Charles Lovell.

A DRAMATIC COMPANY is wanted for a season of ten months, commencing Aug. 3, at the Globe Theatre, Chicago, Ill., and stars and combinations will be treated with on liberal terms. Address as per card in another column.

HARRY MEREDITH advertises that he has for disposal a new five-act play entitled "A Stay of Proceedings," suitable for an Irish character comedian or lady star.

USEFUL ARTISTS are wanted for J. A. Simon's Star Comedy Company for the Fall season, commencing at St. Louis, Mo., about Aug. 1. Address as per advertisement.

LOUISE HAWTHORNE is referred to a card in another column.

MISS EFFIE WARREN was married to J. Kingsley Fairman of Elmira, N. Y., at Nashua, N. H., May 19, by the Rev. Mr. Weatherbee.

MISS ROSA RAND has been engaged by Frank Mayo to travel with him during the coming season and act the character of Eleanor Vaughn in "Davy Crockett."

FRANK MAYO commences an engagement at the California Theatre, San Francisco, Cal., on July 14.

LAWRENCE BARRETT and dramatic company are to perform at Titusville, Pa., June 16, 17.

LAURA KEENE and her dramatic company were in Indianapolis, Ind., June 5, 6, 7.

J. HOLMES GROVER will commence his season of 1873 and '74 at Philadelphia the latter part of August, and has vacant dates after Nov. 8, for which he can be secured to produce "I. O. U." See advertisement.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., our customary budget of theatrical news from our regular correspondent is dated May 31, and as appended: "At the California Theatre Mr. Barton Hill, who is a graceful actor in the light and elegant characters of the drama, closed on the 31st a two weeks' engagement, which was moderately attended throughout. During the week now past 'How She Loves him,' 'London Assurance' and 'Henry the Fourth' were each played twice in the order named. 'Henry the Fourth,' which was the novelty, was produced for the benefit of Mr. Hill on the 30th, when the audience present was larger than usual. Considering that the play was placed on the stage without time for special preparation, being as it were an inspiration of the moment, it must be said that the representation was surprisingly good. John McCullough as Hotspur played with a fire which permeated the entire drama. His energy was tireless. The impetuosity, the indignant sarcasm and the chivalrous bearing of Harry Percy were all duly accentuated, and there were present at the same time a unity of thought and the use of a fine method in the execution which ensured a symmetry to a very animated picture. Mr. Barton Hill's Prince Hal was a rakish spirit with the airs and manners of a gentleman. The comedy was a true one, and the graces of Indian warfare therein contained. She informs the young ladies, and they, taking the hint, stuff both master and servant with the most wonderful Indian stories, especially of the way in which Indians attack yachts, swiping and roaring all on board. When they have got them into the proper state of terror, loud shouts are heard without, and Janet comes rushing in with the intelligence that the Indians have attacked the vessel. The girls pretend to be terrified, and Grace and Janet rush out to help, presently returning, however, disguised as Indian warriors. After driving Percival and Dan nearly distracted, they throw aside their disguises, laugh heartily at their victims, and the sketch ends. This is but the outline of the piece, and conveys no idea of the laughable and fun, the songs, the dances, duets, and the almost limitless amount of funny business with which it abounds. The motion of the vessel is admirably counterfeited, and you can almost imagine it really sailing away before you. Every lurch is followed by a simultaneous stagger in the same direction by all the characters. Of the acting, there is little to be said except in the way of praise. Fred as the seasick Englishman was tremendously funny, his numberless bits of business being bold, original and effective. His dancing was in the same inimitable style as in former pieces, and his singing was capital. Rosina claims next mention for a charming bit of acting as Janet, the roguish waiting-maid. In her Indian disguise she was also capital, giving a burlesque war dance that never failed to elicit an encore. Mrs. Grace Gaybird was very handsome in her yachting dress, and her singing and dancing were first-class in every respect. Her voice is really very powerful and very sweet, and shows signs of considerable cultivation. Fawdon as Captain Percival's bragging propensities, she resolves to treat him to a number of practical jokes, and for that purpose she calls to her assistance her bosom friend and ally Ella Hamilton (Miss Jessie Vokes) and her maid Janet (Miss Rosina Vokes). The result of the conspiracy formed by these three mischievous sprites forms the 'Fun in a Fog.' Percival has been telling lots of his great prowess as a sailor, and Miss Grace invites him to a yachting excursion

THE PEAK FAMILY OF BELLRINGERS were to have performed at Allegan, Mich., May 31, but failed to put in an appearance, and it was reported that the troupe had collapsed at Kalamazoo, Mich.

A TENOR DRUMMER advertises for an engagement to travel with a circus or dramatic company.

SMITH'S BELLRINGERS and Charley Harrison, humorist, were at London, O., June 5, Mechanicsburg 6, 7 and are billed at Ashley 9, Cardington 10, Mt. Gilead 11, 12.

ARTISTS desiring engagements with the Holman English Opera Troupe for the season of 1873 and '74 are requested to address as per advertisement.

Chorus singers are also wanted.

BLIND TOM is to close his season about June 27.

AN ACCOMPANIST, who is also a good pianist, advertises for an engagement.

W. P. SPAULDING, proprietor of Spaulding's Bellringers, wishes us to state that his company has sung quartets with Swiss bell accompaniment during the past four years, and that they continue nightly to do so. Georgie Dean Spaulding of that company has just received a new gold cornet of the Helicon pattern.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the stockholders of the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, was held on the afternoon of the 2d inst. The receipts during the year ending April 30, 1873, were $43,596 73, and the expenditures $34,388 35, leaving a balance of $9,208 43. The number of representations given at the Academy during the year was 193, of which the stockholders were admitted to 82. During the year there were but 28 performances of opera in the Academy—a marked falling-off from preceding years.

THE HYERS SISTERS, supported by Wallace King and the Lucca Brothers, gave concerts at Concert Hall, Philadelphia, on the 6th and 7th of June.

GILMORE'S BAND is to give a concert at the St. James Hall, Buffalo, N. Y. June 11.

BLIND TOM is announced to perform at Galena, Ill. June 9, Freeport 10.

H. A. KENDALL, whose address is care of this office, wants a violinist and pianist for a season of ten months, commencing about August 1.

VARIETY HALLS.

HENRY LUCKER, who had been connected with Welch's Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., for many years, died in that city on June 3, at the age of 34 years. He was respected by all who knew him, and his funeral was largely attended, the company of the Theatre Comique being present in a body, and over one hundred musicians marched in the funeral procession, while the leaders of the various cities bands acted as pall-bearers. On the evening of his demise the company of the Theatre Comique, Manager Welch presiding, adopted the following preamble and resolutions as a tribute to his memory:

Whereas, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our much-respected friend, Henry Lucker, who for so many years has with eminent ability discharged the duties devolved upon him as leader of band and orchestra in this theatre;

And whereas, The many years of tried and useful connections of the deceased with his associates in this establishment render an expression of the estimation in which he was held by them eminently fitting at this time; therefore

Resolved, That as members of this company and personal friends of deceased we deplore with unfeigned sorrow this sad and unexpected bereavement, and that we hereby give full testimony to the talent and industry which he brought to his profession. His kindness of heart and upright manliness made his presence ever pleasing to us, and his loss to be more deeply felt; and although we may never grasp the friendly hand again, we will cherish in our hearts the most pleasant recollections of his connection with us. Our sympathies are would extend our sympathy to the wife who mourns the loss of an affectionate husband, to the father and mother who mourn the loss of a beloved son, to the brothers and sisters whose hearts are wounded by this sad bereavement, and as a token of our respect to the memory of our deceased friend and associate we will attend his funeral in a body.

IN MEMORY OF HENRY LUCKER, LEADER OF ORCHESTRA, THEATRE COMIQUE, DETROIT.

You ask us why our hearts are sad;
Our only answer—look! see there!
That is his instrument, silent now;
Look, do you see that vacant chair?
There's where he sat but a week ago.

Smiling, while handing each one his parts.
Others may fill his place, but none
Can fill the void that is in our hearts.

Only a little while ago
We saw him so noble, strong and brave—
Now he sleeps where the budding flowers
Soon will be blossoming on his grave;
And every night when the tinkling bell
Rings for the music, we need not gaze
Through the curtain peephole; alas we know
It is not Henry's hand that plays.

But over the River, beyond its gloom,
We know of a bright and happier land,
And we feel that our loved one is there,
Playing along with the angel band.

And when the Redeemer shall say to all—
Children—to rest in my mansions come,
They'll meet us upon the shining shore,
And play us a heavenly "Welcome Home."

Detroit, June 7, 1873. JOE. A. GELICK.

A. G. COOPER, a leader of orchestra of some twenty years' experience, has opened a hotel for the Summer season at Atlantic City, N. J.

HARRY AND LOTTIE ESTELLE MACARTHEY performed at the St. Charles Theatre, New Orleans, La., four nights ending May 29.

THE WINNETTE commence a four weeks' engagement at the Washington Varieties, Providence, R. I., on June 9.

MISS FLOTIE PELL and Fred. Dix, song-and-dance artists, banjoists, etc., advertise for an engagement.

QUILTER AND GOLDRICH, song-and-dance artists, are at present engaged at the Academy of Music, Toronto, Ont., Canada, where they can be addressed.

AT JEFFERSON'S OPERA-HOUSE, Cumberland, Md., the new people who put in appearance on June 2 were Mme Laurella, vocalist; Mlle. Emma, danseuse; Miss Lizzie Johnson, song-and-dance; and Master George Brooks, cloggist. The rest of the company comprised J. P. Hill, stage-manager; Sam. Keys, Chas. Gallagher, Miss Leo Gordon, Miss Kate Harrison, the latter three closing June 6. T. H. Jefferson and Johnny Woods open on the 9th.

THE FOREIGN APPEARANCES at Shelby's Comique, Buffalo, N. Y., June 2 were Little Eva, Mlle. Lea, Green and Sadler, and Frank Bennet. The serio-comic songs of Little Eva were given with a proficiency rarely exhibited in one of such tender years. She appeared later in a farce, and acquitted herself finely. Mlle. Lea displayed merit in her song-and-dance and skid-bar jig, and was favored with several encores. Endowed with a handsome face, fine figure, clearness of tone in voice and agility in movement, this lady became a favorite at once. Green and Sadler fully sustained their excellent reputation as song-and-dance artists, and Frank Bennet made a decided hit as a comedian. The public continue to throng the cosy auditorium nightly. James Clark and John H. Carle closed with the week, the former going to Wild's, Syracuse, and the latter to the Academy of Music, Toronto. The accessions on the 9th will be Blanche Castle, Burt Wayne, and Harry G. Richmond. The opening of the Canterbury Hall, on May 31, was attended by a large audience, and fine business prevailed during the past week. The two Kittys (Love and Atwood) were received with marked favor, and Bob Lane and the remainder of the company kept their auditors in a continual roar. The company remains as heretofore announced, with the additions, on the 9th, of Vic Howard and Edith Byron, the former of whom is a Buffalo favorite. So reported our correspondent on June 7.

TONY PASTOR'S TROUPE opened at the Academy of Music, Cleveland, Ohio, June 5, to immense business, giving the best entertainment of the kind ever presented to our community, wrote our correspondent on June 6, adding: "Ella Wesner, Jennie Engel, and the Freeman Sisters in their specialties are very fine, and meet with every possible success. The whole company are artists of more than ordinary ability. Tony Pastor's comic songs, Billy Carter's banjo solos, John and [illegible] Delehanty and [illegible] Williams [illegible]

[illegible] benefit on the 6th, and Love party at Detroit on the 9th. [illegible]hy and Mollie Deveu go to the [illegible]en, Chicago, same date."

CINCINNATI VARIETY NEWS to the 6th is furnished by our correspondent as follows: "The new appearance at the National Theatre this week have been Cincinnatus, a graceful song-and-dance man; Nettie Ward, balladist; Dave Williams, banjoist; and Harrison and Francis, in the double act 'Let Me Be.' The rest of the olio consisted of Walter Gale, in character songs; George Davenport, in song-and-dance; and Jeanette McMillan, in fancy dance. The performances closed with the drama of 'Texas Jack,' in which Nat Hyams, Chas. White, J. L. Burdett and the Misses Kent and McMillan took the principal parts. Business has been dull. Next (this) week the Pauline Markham burlesque party opens, and on the 16th the Collini Midget troupe. ..... At the Race-street Varieties the closures have been Dave Williams and Clara Gladstone. Charley Armstrong, a clever Ethiopian and Dutch comedian, opened this week. In conjunction with Fannie Florence he does 'Let Me Be.' To-night (Friday) Fred. D. Harris, the stage-manager, takes a benefit. Biz rather moderate ..... At the Olympic the only new face this week is Molly St. Martins, who opens to-night. Tommy Cassiday closed last night. Biz slow ..... The Pacific Garden is to reopen to-morrow night with a company consisting of Eddie Trainer and Charley Gregory, gymnasts; William Duverney, contortionist; and Ethiopian comedians and lady singers not yet announced ..... The Pearl-street Garden was closed this week by the Mayor. The late company, together with Prof. Henri, juggler; Emma Barret, dancer; and Emma Henri, vocalist, are now making a tour of the neighboring villages ..... Ella M. Halliday, professionally known as Nellie Holloway, now playing at the Race-street Varieties, obtained a decree for divorce and alimony from her late husband, in the Court of Common Pleas in this city, yesterday."

AT DEAGLE'S VARIETIES, St. Louis, Mo., says our correspondent, writing on June 6, "an excellent bill was offered through the week. The Dumb Belle was given for the opening, in which W. E. Lynyard as O'Smirk played with good effect. 'Scenes Behind the Scenes,' by Jas. Maas and Gussie Crayton, was good, particularly their singing. The Weston Sisters, in song-and-dance, were favored with repeated recalls. Mr. Geo. S. Knight is clever in Dutch character song-and-dance, and being possessed of much original wit, enlivened the occasion with many funny sayings. Mlle. Fontainebleau, in her hat-spinning feats, acquitted herself with much credit. Jennie Benson, in her champion clog, was well appreciated. The greatest card for so small a personage was Baby Benson, who in her character songs-and-dances carried the house by storm, and answered every encore with fresh and hearty vigor. Charley Howard, as Barber Jim in 'Nitro Glycerine,' gave a humorous portrayal of the Ethiopian character. To conclude, 'The Magic Toy' was given, with Sig. Constantine as Busy Body, assisted by Mlle. Eveline as Fanchette, and the members of the company, with happy effect."

THE GIRARDS, grotesque dancers, whose address find elsewhere, are at present engaged at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass.

BILLY CORTRIGHT, comedian and end-man, who is at present performing at the Winter Garden, Chicago, Ill., where he can be addressed, is prepared to accept engagements for the Fall and Winter.

WILL C. BURTON and Minnie Rainforth, Zouave drillists and versatile variety artists, can be addressed care of this office by managers desiring to secure them for the balance of the Summer or for the Fall and Winter season.

MISS LIBBY HENSLEY was married recently in New Orleans, La., to Mr. T. Burke, a prominent merchant of that city.

THOMAS DEMPSEY and Miss Ollie Melville were married at New Orleans, La., May 29.

AT THE METROPOLITAN THEATRE, St. Joseph, Mo., the fresh appearances of the past week were Edith Blande, Nell West, Joseph Arthur and Philip. Blanche Forrester was the only departure. Billy Devere, Maude le Moyne, James Gaynor and Maggie Nichols are billed for June 12.

FIRST-CLASS ARTISTS are wanted for Smith's Opera-house, East Saginaw, Mich. See advertisement.

AT WHITE'S OPERA-HOUSE, Memphis, Tenn., business has been good. Blanche and John Nichols, Susie Starr and Nellie West opened on June 8. This is the only place of amusement open in the city. Ella Heflin, by her charming acting and clever dancing, has established herself as a favorite. The Henri Family combination have materially improved. Flora sings sweetly and dances well; Masters Charlie and Tommy are laughable in their specialties ..... It is currently reported that by Oct. 1 a new, large and commodious variety theatre will be opened in this city on Main-st. ..... Buchanan's Olympic closed somewhat abruptly on May 30. So wrote our correspondent on June 6.

GERARD W. HARRISON requests the artists engaged for the opening of the Arcade Theatre Comique, Jersey City, N. J., to assemble for rehearsal on June 13. See notice in another column.

AT TOOKER'S VARIETIES, Norfolk, Va., the fresh appearances since our last report were Fanny Davenport, serio-comic, Minnie Hall, vocalist, and Macy Roadcap, song-and-dance.

THE GRAND CENTRAL VARIETY THEATRE, Philadelphia, was attended by fair audiences during the week ending June 7, the last of the season at this establishment. Charles and Marian Young, who made their first appearance here on the 2d inst., met with a favorable reception in their character sketches, and the Carroll Family, the Claire Sisters, Miss Martha Wren and James Collins, Billy Barry, Mlle. de Rosa and ballet corps appeared. During the Summer vacation the theatre will be renovated, repainted and improved, and will be reopened on the 25th of August with a variety company under the management of Joseph M. Mortimer.

HARRY ENOCHS' VARIETIES, Philadelphia, met with a fair share of patronage during the week ending June 7. The new appearances were Harry Enochs, N. B. Shimer, Miss Lizzie Thatcher and Master James Cheeran. Harry Enochs, by his excellent delineation of Old Brown in the farce of "The Black Shoemaker," proved that his long absence from the stage had not deteriorated his abilities. N. B. Shimer made a decided hit, meeting with much applause in his clever sketch of the "Circus," and in his serio-comic vocalism. Miss Lizzie Thatcher in her Irish specialties, and Master James Sheeran in songs and dances, were also favorably received. This week, N. B. Shimer will appear in his sensational drama of "Under the Lamp-post."

R. W. BUTLER will supply variety artists of respectability for the Summer season at the Boston Theatre. Address as per advertisement.

THE REGULAR SEASON at Mortimer's Varieties, Philadelphia, closed on the 31st ult., and on the 2d of June an extra performance was given for the benefit of its proprietor, Joseph M. Mortimer, when a large audience witnessed an attractive entertainment, in which Bobby Newcomb, Billy Barry and other volunteers appeared to advantage. During the summer season the regular company, under the management of John R. Lane and Wm. J. Gilmore, will travel, making their first stand at Reading on the 9th inst.

CHARLEY GARDNER the Ethiopian comedian has been tendered a complimentary benefit at the Eleventh-street Opera-house, Philadelphia, on the 14th inst.

THE CARRON FAMILY, Conchiti Ronzati, Clara May, Miles Morris and Chris. H. Bernard were the principal members of the variety company engaged last week at the Eleventh-street Theatre, Philadelphia, and performed to poor business. Billy Allen and Bob Wilson, the new proprietors, have made a reduction in the prices of admission.

THE GARDEN MUSIC HALL, Philadelphia, has been thoroughly renovated and repainted. Annie Elmore, Mlle. Saltz, Mel Kurtz, Billy Worrell, Tom Harper, Billy Baker and the Manuel Brothers appeared last week to improving business.

AT DONNELLY'S, Brooklyn, local variety business was the order of the week, the Olympian patrons being on hand to a remunerative extent.

THE SISTERS MARIE AND ELISE BRANDT, fancy dancers, who opened at the Odeon Varieties, Baltimore, Md., June 2, met with unqualified approbation. They are petite in figure and very youthful, graceful and piquante in manner, and exquisite dancers. Miss Lillie Raymond, serio-comic, was also favorably received. The balance of the company here at present comprises George L. Hall, John d'Angelis, Tommy Turner, Walter Melville, "Young America," Master Charlie, Clara Belmont and Maggie Mairs. Business has been good. No changes ..... Otto Burbank, Ethiopian comedian, reappeared at the Opera-house on Monday, 2d, and had a warm reception. Miss Nellie Weaver, a fine-looking fancy dancer, was another new arrival. Attendance liberal. Prof. Higgins and Ada Freeman closed on the 7th. The following people are billed to appear on the 9th: Mons. Blandowski, Emma Gertrude, Fanny May, the Thatcher Brothers and Prof. Nachman, the latter taking charge of the orchestra. An open-air extension of the private refreshment-room has just been built for the benefit of patrons during the sweltering weather, and is a decided improvement ..... Childs W. Young, Ethiopian comedian, is in the city ..... The Front will be thrown open on June 14, afternoon and evening, the occasion being the benefit of Mr. R. M. Reid, treasurer. So reported our correspondent on June 8.

AT SMITH'S OPERA-HOUSE, East Saginaw, Mich., Miss Lola Mattice closed June 4, going to Detroit, Mich. Quinn, and Mrs. Miller and child closed on the 7th. J. H. Clark and Annie Clark, formerly Annie West, opened on the 2d. Hurley and Marr, song-and-dance, and Pauline Hall opened on the 5th. Miss Victoria Howard is billed for the 9th; Eagan and Edwards 16th; Boyd and Scott 23d, and Green and Sadler July 14 ..... The New Rink Varieties opened June 3, with the following officers and company: S. Kaufmann and Co., proprietors; W. J. Marshall, business-manager; George Hall, general superintendent; Hector Bertrand, stage-manager; George Eagle, leader of orchestra; Miss Osborn, vocalist; Agnes Sutherland, Scottish vocalist; Nellie Nelson, soubrette; Mlle. Olivia, character dancer; Annie Mack, vocalist; the Misses Siddels, Rose Dupont, Jennings, Sig. Leon, Bordell, Mr. Geo. Osborn, Charles Cordelle, John Nettled and Joe Mack. On the 9th Johnny Smith, D. Squires, Hugh McCaughna and Miss Mollie Somers are to appear. Next (this) week's entertainment will open with "Mazeppa," Miss Nelson acting the chief character. Business thus far has been remarkably good, and the company, as a whole, is much above the average. So reported our correspondent on June 6.

THE METROPOLITAN VARIETIES is the only place of amusement now open in Washington, D. C. On June 5, Mr. Bernard Henze sold out his entire interest in the establishment to Mr. James Porter, who for several years past has been the business man of the place. Mr. Porter, who is very popular with all classes, is possessed of much energy, and will, no doubt, make good his opening promises to give an improved order of things. Nellie Edwards, serio-comic singer, was the only new appearance on June 2. Minnie and Maggie Claire, Marie and Amelia Gorenflo and Harry Hart are billed to appear on the 9th. The departures on the 7th were Josie Farren and Fannie Kent.

AT THE WASHINGTON VARIETIES, Providence, R. I., business has been fair during the week. Johnny Reese appeared June 2. Lizzie Barrett, John Thorpe, Harry Price, and Nat Rogers and pupil closed on the 7th. The new attractions for the 9th are St. George and Gibbons, Thomas and Lottie Winette, Franky Casey and Fanny Murelle ..... Mr. Stalker intends starting out about the 16th with a canvas show, the entertainment to consist chiefly of acrobatic performances.

AT ANDERSON, whose address is care of this office, wants first-class female performers, including serio-comic vocalists and clog-dancers.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Detroit, Mich., the fresh appearances of the past week were Eagan and Edwards, Joe Gulick, Johnny Rice and Alf. McDowell.

FANNIE GILMORE advertises that she can be engaged for one or two weeks.

THE METROPOLITAN THEATRE, Washington, D. C., has changed hands, James Porter, the former business manager, having purchased Mr. Henze's interest in the house. Stars are wanted. See card elsewhere.

MLLE. FONTAINEBLEAU, who is at present performing at Deagle's Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., states that she will be disengaged after July 21.

LEW SPENCER and Amanda Lee, double song-and-dance and character artists, at present engaged at Enoch's Varieties, Philadelphia, Pa., can be addressed as per advertisement.

TALENT is wanted for the Theatre Comique, Scranton, Pa., which is said to be doing a good business under the management of Frank Lum.

THE WARREN SISTERS, song-and-dance artists and character dancers, and Frank H. Nelson, comedian and pantomimist, who can be addressed as per advertisement, are at liberty to negotiate with responsible managers.

ARTISTS OF ABILITY are wanted for the opening of the New Theatre Comique, Bay City, Mich., which will be completed by about July 15. See card elsewhere.

THE HEYWOOD BROTHERS COMBINATION will commence its next traveling season on July 22, and besides the Heywood Brothers, character vocalists, and the Kantonah Troupe of Chinese jugglers, will include the following artists: The Bensley Brothers, gymnasts; J. W. La Grange, dancing barrel, etc.; Tom Fallon, clog and jig dancer; Ed. Mason, Irish comedian; Andrews and Maret, minstrel performers, and a brass-band under the leadership of Cyrus White, cornet soloist.

JOHN RUSHTON, cloggist, Charlie Fox, Dutch comedian, and the Gnirados Brothers, gymnasts, were the new faces at the Metropolitan, Indianapolis, Ind., the past week. Tommy Granger, who closed on June 7, opens in Cleveland; Loveland and McCabe go to Nashville. Clara Lavarnie, Joe Lovely, Georgie May, Ella Raymond, Little Florence, Jennie Cole and H. C. Butcher open on the 9th.

MCLEAR'S STAR AGGREGATION AND BRASS BAND performed at Cazenovia, June 5, Morrisville 6, Canastota 7, and are billed at Cortland 9, Homer 10, Tully 11, Moravia 12.

JOE MILLS' THEATRE COMIQUE at Bay City, Mich., is now being rebuilt, and will be completed about July 15. Business has been fair. Gus Peters, stage-manager, and Mlle. Annetta closed on June 6. Geo. Kurtz succeeds Peters. The new faces were Geo. Siler and Billy Madden, light-weights, engaged for the week only. They met with a flattering reception. Also the Collyer Brothers, who are lively in the song-and-dance business. Siler and Madden go to Detroit for June 9. Miss Nellie Clarke, Mollie Somers and Johnny Smith open on the 9th.

TALENT is wanted for the Athenæum, Chicago, Ill., and performances are requested to address Charley Gleason, as per card elsewhere.

TONY PASTOR'S Variety Combination are to open at the Pittsburgh Opera-house on June 9, for one week.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Cleveland, O., June 4, Manning and Moran, the Irish sketch artists of the company, says our correspondent, "the attendance has not been as large as the merits of the performances deserved. Ling-Look and Yamadiva appeared on June 2, and are unequaled in their specialties, but having played a lengthy engagement in the city a short time since, they are really little attraction now. The bill is entirely changed from that of last week, with one exception—'Clodoche,' and all the old favorites appear in new features to the general satisfaction of the audiences. The entertainment winds up with the drama by John F. Poole, entitled 'The Race, or The Mysteries of the Turf.' John Queen, Toney Hart, E. Harrigan, and John Wild are exceedingly funny, whilst Jennie Hughes, Ada Wray and Kitty Tilstone are likewise excellent. Annie Yeamans and Little Jennie Yeamans are underlined for the 16th ..... Everything is serene at the Winter Garden, and well it might be, for the business is good and the entertainments are of the best. Kearney and Morgan, Irish double songs-and-dance, and Mort Williams, who does a dance on a peck measure, appeared on the 2d, and are fine in their business. The Dorr Sisters, Julia Barton, Eunice Dunlap, Courtright and Gilbert, remain. J. C. Murphy and Mollie Devau are to appear on the 9th ..... At the Athenæum, John Nealan, Mancini, Minnie Moore, Little Flora and Master Wallace are the fresh appearances. Millie West closed on the 31st, and Lottie Wentworth closes on the 7th. Business very good and performances ditto."

"THE BLACK CROOK" was given at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, up to Wednesday evening, June 4, and was then withdrawn. On Thursday entire change of programme occurred, on which evening Sheridan and Mack, the Girards, Alecia Jourdain and Frank Casey opened. The programme during the balance of the week was as follows: The Irish sketch "Bad Whiskey," with Sheridan and Mack; Bonnie Runnels in his miniature Dutch character songs; the Carles in their Pas de Trois; Miss Lily singing "Awfully Clever;" McKee and Rogers in "Rebecca Jane;" the Girards in "Le Delire;" Alecia Jourdain in serio-comic songs; the ballet from "The Black Crook;" Sheridan and Mack as "Little Frands;" Burnell Family in their gymnastic feats; Little Frank Casey in song-and-dance; Austin and Hess in their skating act; the California Quartet in their four-part songs; Herr Willio with his bird imitations; and the sketch of "The Bouncer." On the 7th the Runnells Family, the Carles, Frank Casey, Austin and Hess and Herr Willio closed. On the 9th Sam Sharpley, Sam Devere, D. L. Morris, Walters and Morton and John Morris open.

MISS CHARLOTTE STANLEY, who has been performing Madge, in "Crime," at Deagle's Varieties, St. Louis, created such a favorable impression that she has just signed a contract with Mr. Deagle to re-open with him for November and three weeks, on a certainty of two hundred dollars per week, to reproduce "Crime," and another new sensation entitled "A Fight for Life." This speaks well for the lady's abilities to please.

R. W. BUTLER, with his present company performing at the Athenæum, New York, augmented by many distinguished performers, is to continue a season at the Boston (Mass.) Theatre on June 23.

W. A. ROUSE, Fanny Derham Rouse, Madame Lepez and her infant gymnastic troupe, Miss Willa Brong, Mr. Alvin Vivian, Mr. F. Altemas, Mr. C. Jackson, Mr. Bill Byrne and others, start from Pittsburgh this week on their short season of variety entertainments at Sharon, Pa.

MATT WHEELER, a good negro comedian; Barney Reynolds, eccentric Dutch comedian and vocalist, whose songs are encored three or four times nightly; and Pendy, Ethiopian burlesque comedian, were the fresh appearances at the Bijou Theatre, Pittsburgh, on the 2d inst. Miss Sallie Chieftop reappeared at the same time. H. C. Melville continues, and his character songs are given with good effect. Manchester and Jennings have been re-engaged for the entire Summer season. These gentlemen have been at this establishment for months; in their line of business they have no ordinary monkeys, a monkey with young, four beautiful parrots, white-faced baboon and chetah leopard. The latter is said to be the only one of that species of leopard now in America. At Reading five museum cars, two new canvass and twelve sets of horses' harness were received. Ryan Feist, the manager, is now at his home in Amenia, N. Y., after having been confined to his hotel in Harrisburg, Pa., with rheumatism.

THE ORRIN BROTHERS and Mlle. Lucia, acrobats and gymnasts, are at present traveling with G. F. Bailey's Circus.

CHARLES AND MATHEWS and Belle Celeste, aerial gymnasts, also the Milan Kent, clown, joined Pell & Dean's Circus of All Nations at Albany, N. Y., recently.

JOHN ROBINSON'S CIRCUS is to show at Fort Wayne, Ind., June 27, Indianapolis 28.

FOREPAUGH'S AGGREGATION, which is said to be doing a good business in Michigan, will exhibit in Detroit June 16, Ann Arbor 17, St. Clair 18, Port Huron 14, Almont 16, and Lapeer 17.

THE NEW YORK AND NEW ORLEANS ZOOLOGICAL AND EQUESTRIAN EXPOSITION, under the management and proprietorship of W. W. Cole, closed a season of four days at Salt Lake City, Utah, on May 31. A correspondent writing on that date says: "It was the first large show we have had, and the only menagerie that was ever exhibited here. At each entertainment Brigham Young and his family—consisting of seventeen wives and forty-seven children—were present, and seemed to enjoy the entertainment hugely. They occupied a part of the amphitheatre seats, which the proprietors set apart for them. The whole of Cole's Exposition's business at Denver, where a menagerie was also seen for the first time, was immense, it being reported that the receipts from five shows amounted to $12,000. They are on the way to California with the first large menagerie ever in that country. Dan Castello, who joined here some four years since, had only four cages of animals, while the concern has sixteen large double cages, besides a large circus company, a full list of which was published in THE CLIPPER in its annual record of circuses, menageries, etc. It is stated that they pay the U. P. R. R. $10,000 for transportation from Omaha to San Francisco, Cal., and that they will use twenty-five cars. They will take in all of California, thence to Oregon, return to San Francisco, and from there about Oct. 1 the circus, den of lions and elephant will go to Australia and exhibit in the large towns during the winter of 1873-4, returning to San Francisco for the tenting season of 1874. They performed in Salt Lake City three weeks, Ogden 3, Wyoming 4, Reno, Nevada, 5, Virginia City 6, 7, and are billed at Carson 9, Truckee, Cal., 10, Colfax 11, Auburn 12, Sacramento 13, 14.

J. E. WARNER'S GRAND TRIPLE ALLIANCE is to show at Old City, Pa., June 13, Titusville 14.

THE GREAT CHICAGO SHOW is billed to perform at Indianapolis, Ind., June 11.

C. DANKS, whose address is care of this office, wants circus performers.

E. W. WOOLCOTT advertises for sale four giraffes, three camels, two antbears and three African snakes, which are to arrive about June 20.

THE CHICAGO CIRCUS, with James Robinson as chief attraction, opens in Cincinnati on the 16th on the same lot occupied by John Robinson's show.

G. F. BAILEY'S CIRCUS is to perform at Lafayette, Ind., June 10, 11.

WALTER MELVILLE & SONS, posturers and gymnasts, have changed their names on account of the similarity between their professional title and that of James Melville & Sons, the Australian rider and posturers, and will hereafter be known as the Morosco Family.

HOWE'S LONDON CIRCUS, COMBINED WITH SANGER'S MENAGERIE, exhibited on Behair Common, Baltimore, Md., on June 4, 5, 6 and 7, doing a fair business. The street pageant was the finest seen there this season. They go to Washington, D. C., June 9, for four days.

VAN AMBURGH'S MENAGERIE and Frost's Royal Coliseum will give two performances daily at Thirteenth and Thompson streets, Philadelphia, during the week ending June 14.

JOHN HENRY COOKE, who this season exhibits his skilled equestrianism with John H. Murray's Circus, is favorably noticed by the press of the different cities visited, as will be seen by the appended extracts:

Among the performers is the celebrated John H. Cooke, who performs a number of original and startling feats of horsemanship [illegible] horses. [illegible]

[illegible] Railroad Circus will, during [illegible] large towns and cities "way down in Maine," and extend its tour to the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The equestrian drama of "Dick Turpin's Ride to York, and the Death of Black Bess," is said to be the most successful play ever acted in the ring in this country, John Henry Cooke's rendition of the highwayman being full of dash and vim, and the entire performance thrilling.—Sporting Times (Boston), May 24.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PROF. GERTRUDE, whose address find elsewhere, has a troupe of trained canary birds for sale.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Lincoln, Nebraska, just completed by Messrs. Walsh & Putnam, measures 30 by 90 feet, and adjoining it is a large banqueting-room, which by opening folding doors can be connected with the hall, making the seating capacity six hundred. The stage is 16 by 30 feet, and the hall is furnished with scenery, drop-curtain, dressing-room, ticket-office, etc. Parties desiring to rent it will find the proprietors' card in another column.

W. H. KANE advertises for a side-show blower.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

DRAMATIC.

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE was the only establishment in the British metropolis at which anything really fresh in the dramatic line had been offered the public since our previous advices. The novelty there was Wilkie Collins' dramatization of his own novel, "The New Magdalen," in which splendid acting on the part of Miss Neilson will be found upon one of our outside pages. This drama was originally produced at the late Globe Theatre, Boston, Mass., in May last. Its success in London has been great, and a long run was confidently predicted ..... Dr. Westland Marston's comedy, "Donna Diana," has been revived at the Holborn, and at the Standard the Queen's company had appeared in "The Tempest" throughout the week ..... Morgan Smith, colored tragedian, had appeared at the Surrey in "The Stranger" and "Hamlet." ..... T. Mead was starring at the Victoria in "Island Law." ..... At the Princess' Alexander Dumas' "idees de Madame Aubray" was presented on May 19 by the French company ..... "La Fille de Madame Angot" had been performed to good houses at the St. James, by the company from the Fantasies Parisiennes at Brussels ..... The drama of "Little Em'ly" had been transferred from the stage of the Olympic to the Pavilion, where it entered on a successful career May 19 ..... An adaptation, by C. A. Clarke, of Eugene Sue's "Wandering Jew" was brought out at the Grecian on the same date ..... Madame Ristori has been engaged by Mr. Mapleson, and is to appear at Drury Lane during the present month as Marie Antoinette ..... Lancashire grew enthusiastic over Miss Litton at the Royalty May 27, Miss Milner Lloyd, who made a successful
